

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Liberal Democracy and the Place of Religion in Politics	1
Robert Audi
Separation of Church and State as Addressed to the State, 3
The Libertarian Principle, 4
The Equalitarian Principle, 5
The Neutrality Principle, 6
Religious Obligation and Political Conduct, 9
Grounds and Dimensions of Religious Obligation, 10
The Mutual Independence of Religious Sources of Obligation, 12
Connections among Religious and Secular Sources, 13
Civic Virtue and Religious Conviction, 16
Civic Virtue, Religious Commitment, and Moral Obligation, 17
Theo-ethical Equilibrium, 21
Some Principles and Practices of Civic Virtue, 24
Secular Rationale, 25
Secular Motivation, 28
Civic Voice, 34
The Mutual Integration of Civic and Religious Virtues, 35
The Principle of Theo-ethical Equilibrium, 37
Separation of Church and State as Addressed to the Church, 38
Ecclesiastical Neutrality, 39
Clerical Neutrality, 45
Some Problems of Application, 47

The Role of Religion in Decision and Discussion of Political Issues	67
Nicholas Wolterstorff
The Role of Citizen and Its Ethics,	67
What Is a Liberal Democracy?,	69
The Liberal Position,	72
The Ethic of the Citizen and Restraints on Reason,	76
Are Religious Reasons too Dangerous to Permit?,	78
Locke's Version of the Liberal Position,	80
Rawls's Version of the Liberal Position,	90
Rawls's Attempt to Identify the Independent Source,	96
Does the Source Yield the Principles Needed?,	102
Is It Fair to Ask Everyone to Use the Source?,	104
Rawls's Rationale,	105
What Does Respect Require?,	109
No Restraint on Religious Reasons,	111
Do We Need Consensus?,	113
The Consocial Position,	114
Application to Public Officials,	116
Wolterstorff on Religion, Politics, and the Liberal State	121
Robert Audi
Liberalism and Religion,	121
Wolterstorff's Critique of the Liberalism of Locke and Rawls,	129
Wolterstorff's Positive View of Religion and Politics,	139
Audi on Religion, Politics, and Liberal Democracy	145
Nicholas Wolterstorff
Audi's Version of the Liberal Position,	148
Audi's Rationale,	151
Evaluation of the Rationale,	157
Audi's Independent Source,	161
In Summary,	164

Religion, Politics, and Democracy: Closing Comments and Remaining Issues	167
Robert Audi
The Scope of Impartiality, 167
Consensus versus Majority Preference as Democratic Standards, 168
The Justification of Coercion, 169
Liberal Democracy and Mutual Respect, 172
Secular Reasons and Secular Motivation, 173
Index	175
About the Authors	179