

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	xi
1 Introduction	1
2 Ethnographic Introduction	7
Oktoberdruck (October-printing),	11
KoMet (Metalworking Cooperative),	15
FahrradBüro (Cycle-office),	17
Wuseltronick (Fumbling with Electronics),	20
3 Utopian Dreams and Cohesion in Membership	25
Political Background of Collectives and Their Members,	26
Four Ideal Types of Collectivist,	34
Generational Turnover and Wearing Out of Utopian Ideals,	45
4 Political Consumer-Producer Relations	49
Alternative Forms of Financing,	49
Technological Standards and Competition,	58
The Trademark: Creating a Market Niche,	63
Producing for Ordinary Customers,	68
Conclusion,	71
5 Investment and Consumption	73
Legal Forms of Collective Property,	74

Immediate Expenditure Versus Long-Term Investment,	80
High Demands on Idealism,	87
Conclusion,	97

6 Self-Management 99

Non-Directive Planning,	99
Compromise and No Decision,	110
The "Boss,"	115
Conclusion,	124

7 The Division of Labour in Collectives 127

A Working Day with Oktoberdruck : 18 February 1984,	129
The Non-Division of Labour,	133
The Problem of Working Together,	145
Transmitting Knowledge,	150
The Limits of Collectivity: Sexual Division of Labour,	154
Conclusion,	158

8 Work-Time and Social Boundaries 161

A Different Rhythm at Work,	162
Conflicting Demands of Private and Collective Spheres,	168
Labour Power Is Not for Sale,	175
Conclusion,	181

9 Conclusion 183

Appendix	189
Bibliography	193
Index	205