

Contents

Foreword	ix
Preface	xvii
Chapter 1
“Up front” about topic, methods and limitations	1
1.1. Delimiting the topic: what this book is and what it isn’t about	2
1.2. Sampling problems, solutions and implications	7
Chapter 2
Sanctity: Where language and religion meet	11
2.1. Spirit and soul	13
2.2. Materia sancta	16
2.3. Language as a moral issue	18
2.4. Parallels to nature and the body	20
2.5. Life and death	25
2.6. Summary	27
Chapter 3
Ethnicity	31
3.1. Kinship	34
3.2. Of hearth and home	37
3.3. People, culture, identity	39
3.4. History/heritage: Past, present and future	45
3.5. Cognitive and emotional contributions	48
3.6. Unity: Territorial, cultural and beyond	53
3.7. Summary	57
Chapter 4
Status planning	61
4.1. Responsibility for the language (status planning): Introduction	61
4.2. Rejecting past insult and injury	63

4.3. Cross-language comparisons	68
4.4. The moral obligation (and the natural right) to foster	72
4.5. The struggle for a life with dignity	75
4.6. Status aspirations and satisfactions	79
4.7. Dreams and displays of wealth, power and demographic strength	88
4.8. Summary	91

Chapter 5

Corpus planning	95
5.1. Rejecting negative attributes	97
5.2. "A thing of beauty is a joy forever"	101
5.3. Modernization: Perfecting the perfect	104
5.4. Codification: Systematizing the sublime	108
5.5. The written language: The symbolic apogee	111
5.6. Summary	114

Chapter 6

Summary: Inside in, outside out; different voices, different views	119
6.1. Introduction: What do we gain by listening to "the voice from within" in the study of positive ethnolinguistic consciousness?	119
6.2. Contrasting the perspective of positive ethnolinguistic consciousness and that of most humanistic and social science inquiries vis-à-vis the ethnicity-sanctity relationship	125
6.3. The points of view of positive ethnolinguistic consciousness and of the humanities/social sciences in connection with ethnicity	131
6.4. The recognition of language status concerns in the humanities and social sciences	143
6.5. The social sciences and humanities consider corpus planning for contextually disadvantaged languages	151
6.6. Negative evaluations of ethnicity and of ethnolinguistic consciousness	156
6.7. On varying stages and intensities of ethnocultural saliency and on the factors which influence them	165
6.8. Summary: Revisiting language and ethnicity	171

Appendix A: Citations	181
Appendix B: Quantitative description and evaluation of the data	299
Notes	307
References	331
Index	343