

CONTENTS

Chapter One. Value Shift in Western Societies	1
Peter Ester, Loek Halman and Ruud de Moor
1. Introduction	1
2. Modernization and individualization as basic features of advanced society	3
2.1 Modernization, individualization and religion	8
2.2 Modernization, individualization and politics	10
2.3 Modernization, individualization and work	12
2.4 Modernization, individualization and primary relationships	13
3. Value convergence and value divergence	15
4. Value fragmentation	17
5. Main hypotheses	18
Notes	20
Chapter Two. Comparative Research on Values	21
Loek Halman and Ruud de Moor
1. Introduction	21
2. The concept of value	21
3. Measuring values	22
4. Cross-cultural comparability	25
5. Convergence or divergence of values	31
6. Summary	33
Notes	35
Chapter Three. Religion, Churches and Moral Values	37
Loek Halman and Ruud de Moor
1. Introduction	37
2. Secularization	42
2.1 Church attendance	43
2.2 Orthodoxy	47
2.3 Religiosity	50
2.4 Confidence in the church	53
2.5 Rites of passage	55
2.6 The public role of churches	55

3. Moral values	56
3.1 Moral permissiveness	56
3.2 Civic morality	60
4. What explains the variance in value orientations?	61
4.1 The religious-moral value pattern	62
4.2 Socio-demographic variables	63
5. Conclusions	64
Notes	65

Chapter Four. Political Culture. Patterns of Political Orientations and Behaviour

67

Andries van den Broek and Felix Heunks

1. Introduction	67
2. Political culture: Orientations and participation	67
2.1 Political orientations	69
2.2 Political participation	69
3. Political culture 1981-1990: hypotheses	70
3.1 Individualization	72
3.2 Convergence or divergence?	74
4. Individualization	74
4.1 Economic and cultural individualism	75
4.2 Confidence in institutions	77
4.3 Tolerance	77
4.4 Political interest	78
4.5 Protest proneness	78
4.6 Postmaterialism	80
4.7 Technological orientation	80
4.8 Left-right orientation	81
4.9 Political fragmentation	83
4.10 Varieties of political participation	84
4.11 Political participation	86
5. Convergence or divergence?	88
6. The role of socio-demographic variables: Age, sex and education	89
7. The role of cohort replacement in the development of political culture	91
8. Concluding remarks	95

Chapter Five. Primary Relations in Western Societies	97
Piet van den Akker, Loek Halman and Ruud de Moor
1. Introduction	97
2. Primary relations in demographic perspective	98
3. Individualization and primary relationships	100
4. Individualization of family values	102
4.1 Marriage values	102
4.2 Family values	106
4.3 Parent-child relations	110
4.4 Sexual freedom	113
4.5 Abortion	115
4.6 Socialization of children	117
5. Convergence or divergence since 1981?	120
6. Age and education as explanatory factors	121
6.1 Age and value changes	122
6.2 Education and value changes	123
7. Conclusions	124
Notes	127
 Chapter Six. Changing Work Values	 129
Harry Zanders
1. Introduction	129
2. Centrality of work in 1990	132
3. Changes in work values between 1981 and 1990	136
4. Explanatory socio-demographic factors	139
5. Differences in work values per country	142
6. Convergence and divergence	143
7. Job satisfaction, pride and autonomy	144
8. Authority and achievement	146
9. Power distribution	147
10. Solidarity in 1990	149
11. Conclusions	150
Notes	153

Chapter Seven. Value Patterns and Modernity	155
Loek Halman and Ruud de Moor
1. Introduction	155
2. Value fragmentation at the individual level?	156
3. Coherent value patterns at the societal level?	158
4. Conclusions	161
Chapter Eight. Environmental Concern and Offering Willingness in Europe and North America	163
Peter Ester, Loek Halman and Brigitte Seuren
1. Introduction	163
2. Europeans and their environmental concern	165
3. Environmental concern and offering willingness	168
4. Towards a typology of environmental attitudes	172
5. What explains variation in environmental attitudes?	174
6. Conclusions	180
Notes	181
Chapter Nine. Individualization of the life course and cultural divergence between age groups	183
Henk Vinken, Peter Ester and Henk-Jan Dirven
1. Introduction	183
2. Cultural divergence and the life course	185
3. Methods and instruments	187
4. Results	190
5. Discussion	195
Chapter Ten. Eastern Europe after 1989	197
Andries van den Broek and Ruud de Moor
1. Introduction	197
2. Eastern Europe: Modern history until 1990	198
3. Eastern Europe: The concept	200
4. Some reservations	202
5. Modernization and individualization in Eastern Europe	203
6. Religious values	205
6.1 Church membership and church attendance	206

6.2	Religiosity and orthodoxy	207
6.3	Confidence in the church	208
6.4	Public role of the churches	209
7.	Political values	210
7.1	Tolerance	211
7.2	Confidence in institutions	212
7.3	Economic and cultural individualism	213
7.4	Postmaterialism	214
7.5	Left-right	215
7.6	Environmental concern	215
7.7	Involvement in politics	216
7.8	Cohort replacement and postmaterialism in Poland and Hungary	218
8.	Values concerning primary relations	219
8.1	Marriage	219
8.2	Family life	220
8.3	Parent-child relations	221
8.4	Permissiveness	222
9.	Work values	223
9.1	Expressive work values	223
9.2	Criteria for distributing scarce jobs	224
9.3	Job evaluation	225
10.	Concluding remarks	226
	Notes	228
	Epilogue	229
	Ruud de Moor
	References	233
	Appendices	253
	Appendix 1. Tables	254
	Appendix 2. Technical details of the survey	273
	Author index	301
	Subject index	305
	About the authors	309