

The Hidden Meaning of Mass Communications

Cinema, Books, and Television in the Age of Computers

FEREYDOUN HOVEYDA

PRAEGER

Westport, Connecticut
London

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction: Cinema and Books	ix
1. Superiority of Literature?	1
2. Cinema and Dreams	7
3. Photography, Painting, Cinema, and Realism	11
4. Influence of Literature on Cinema	19
5. Some Misunderstandings	25
6. Film Shows, Literature Says	33
7. The Question of Adaptations	37
8. Cinema and Theater	43
9. The Director as Author	51
10. Filmmakers Haunted by Literature	61
11. Cinema and Technology	65
12. Different Ways of Looking at and Making Films	69
13. Film Language?	75

14. What Is Mise-en-Scène?	81
15. Pace and Rhythm	89
16. Light as a Character	93
17. Settings and Details	95
18. Changes in Filmmaking in the '60s and '70s	97
19. Changes in Filmmaking in the '80s and '90s	105
20. Cinema and Television	115
21. Cyber Cinema?	123
22. Are There Books in Our Future?	129
23. Cyber Narration: Shaharazad and Proust as Computer Programmers	137
24. The Meaning of It All	143
Notes	149
Selected Bibliography	155
Name Index	161
Subject Index	167

Photo essay follows page 79.