

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword BY PHILLIP K. TOMPKINS	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	i

PART I

CHAPTER 1
Democracy and Diversity	9
Limitations of a Marketplace Diversity	15
Conclusion	20
CHAPTER 2
Social Justice and the Critical Imagination	24
Rejecting the Entertainment Model of Citizenship	29
Creative Democracy and the Importance of the Critical Imagination	35
Conclusion	41
CHAPTER 3
Communication as Epistemic and the Communicative Imagination	43
The Communicative Imagination	53
Conclusion	57
CHAPTER 4
Exploring Our Theoretical and Methodological Assumptions	60
The Critical Paradigm	63
Neo-Pragmatism	68
Conclusion	70

PART II

CHAPTER 5
Perspectivalism and Cosmopolitanism	75
Perspectivalism: De-Centering the "Real"	80
Conclusion	87
CHAPTER 6
The Contribution of Four Philosophers to This Project	89
Nietzsche, Cultural Criticism, and the "Good American"	89
Emerson and the Unattained Yet Attainable Self	96
Dewey's Democracy as a Moral Problem	97
Rorty's Anti-Foundationalism	101
Conclusion	105

CHAPTER 7

Alienation and Power	107
Power, Alienation, and Communication	108
Conclusion	118

PART III

CHAPTER 8

Contrasting Platonic and Critical Models of Education	123
Platonic v. Critical Models of Education	124
Critical Education	127
Conclusion	133

CHAPTER 9

Service Learning	135
Theoretical Bases of Service Learning	136
Social Justice–Oriented Service Learning	138
A Social Justice–Oriented Service Learning Model	140
Conclusion	149

CHAPTER 10

Final Remarks	150
References	153
Index	169