

CHILDREN, FAMILIES, AND STATES

Time Policies of Childcare, Preschool, and Primary Education in Europe

Edited by

Karen Hagemann, Konrad H. Jarausch, and Cristina Allemann-Ghionda

Berghahn Books

NEW YORK • OXFORD

CONTENTS

List of Tables, Figures, and Illustrations   viii

Preface   xi

I. Introduction: Time Policy—A New Approach for the Comparative Analysis of Childcare and Education

1. Children, Families, and States: Time Policies of Childcare and Schooling in a Comparative Historical Perspective   3
Karen Hagemann, Konrad H. Jarausch, and Cristina Allemann-Ghionda
2. The Politics of Time: Comparing and Explaining Current Work-Family Policies—Theoretical and Methodological Reflections   51
Kimberly J. Morgan

II. Background and Context: Family Policies in Comparison

3. Family Law and Gender Equality: Comparing Family Policies in Postwar Western Europe   75
Ute Gerhard
4. From Equality to Difference? Comparing Gendered Family Policies in Post-1945 Eastern Europe   94
Jacqueline Heinen
5. Family Policies and Birth Rates: Childbearing, Female Work, and the Time Policy of Early Childhood Education in Postwar Europe   113
Livia Sz. Oláh

III. Case Studies: Time Policies of Childcare, Preschool, and Primary Education in Europe

A. All-Day Childcare and Education Systems in Western Europe

6. The Best Interest of the Child: Early Childhood Education in Norway and Sweden since 1945 137
Tora Korsvold
7. The Scandinavian Model: The Time Policy of Primary School Education in Twentieth-Century Sweden 156
Lisbeth Lundahl
8. Continuities and Changes—Tensions and Ambiguities: Childcare and Preschool Policies in France 175
Jeanne Fagnani
9. Contrasting Policies of All-Day Education: Preschools and Primary Schools in France and Italy since 1945 196
Cristina Allemann-Ghionda
10. (Pre)School Is Not Childcare: Preschool and Primary School Education Policies in Spain since the 1930s 220
Celia Valiente
11. From Weak Social Democracy to Hybridized Neoliberalism: Early Childhood Education in Britain since 1945 237
Kevin J. Brehony and Kristen D. Nawrotzki
12. Gender, Class, and Schooling: Education Policy, School Time, and the Labor Market in Post-1945 Britain 257
Sally Tomlinson

B. Part-Time Pre- and Primary School Systems with Additional Childcare in West-Central Europe

13. A West German “Sonderweg”? Family, Work, and the Half-Day Time Policy of Childcare and Schooling 275
Karen Hagemann
14. From Part-Time to All Day? Time Policies in the Swiss Childcare, Preschool, and Primary School System since 1945 301
Claudia Crotti

C. All-Day Childcare and Part-Time Pre- and Primary School Systems in Eastern Europe

15. Beyond Ideology: The Time Policy of Russian School Education since 1945 323

Anatoli Rakhkochkine

16. Economy and Politics: The Time Policy of the East German Childcare and Primary School System 344

Monika Mattes

17. Tradition Matters: Childcare, Preschool, and Primary Education in Modern Hungary 364

Dorottya Szikra

18. Female Employment, Population Policy, and Childcare: Early Childhood Education in Post-1945 Czech Society 385

Hana Hašková

Selected Bibliography 405

Notes on Contributors 418

Index 426

TABLES, FIGURES, AND ILLUSTRATIONS

TABLES

Table 1.1. Children in childcare, preschool, and “out-of-school” services, daily opening hours of primary schools, and female employment rates in Europe, 1987–1989 36

Table 2.1. Enrollment in licensed childcare and preschool programs, Europe 2004–2005 55

Table 2.2. Normal opening hours of primary schools in the European Union, 2004 57

Table 2.3. Compensation for statutory parental leave in the European Community, 2003 58

Table 7.1. Teaching time allocation in Swedish compulsory education (hours per week), 1919–2007 161

Table 8.1. The development of the female labor force participation in France, 1975–2006 181

Table 8.2. The labor force participation of mothers living with a partner—according to the number of children (aged less than eighteen) in France, 1990–2005 183

Table 12.1. Women in the labor force, Great Britain, 1951–2000 261

Table 13.1. Childcare places for three- to six-year-old children in the German Empire and West Germany, 1910–1989 280

Table 13.2. Number of all-day schools in West Germany, 1954–1987 282

Table 13.3. Development of women’s employment in West Germany, 1950–1989 286

Table 13.4. The percentage of working mothers (full- and part-time) according to their children's ages in 2005 290

Table 15.1. Students in extended-day schools (compulsory grades 1–8) in Russia, 1960–1985 332

Table 16.1. Childcare for three- to six-year-old children in the GDR, 1955–1989 347

Table 16.2. Childcare for school children and day schools in the GDR, 1955–1989 349

Table 16.3. Women's employment in the GDR, 1955–1989 355

Table 17.1. Crèches and kindergartens in Hungary, 1938–2000 373

Table 18.1. Children (zero to five years old) in crèches and kindergartens in Czech society, 1948–2005 391

FIGURES

Figure 2.1. Average number hours per year of compulsory instruction time, Europe 2005 56

Figure 2.2. Share of part-time work for mothers, youngest child under six, Europe 2002 59

Figure 5.1. The birth rates in the European Union, 2003 (children per 100 women) 114

Figure 5.2. Correlation between the percentage of women working part-time and total fertility rate in the European Union and Norway in 2004–2005 121

Figure 5.3. Correlation between the percentage of under-three-year-old children in childcare and total fertility rate in the European Union and Norway in the early 2000s 122

Figure 5.4. Correlation between the percentage of childless women born in 1955 and the percentage of eighteen- to thirty-four-year-old women with “0 child” as ideal family size in the European Union in the early 2000s 125

Figure 5.5. Correlation between the percentage of eighteen- to thirty-four-year-old women with “0 child” as ideal family size and length of experience of fertility below the critical level in the European Community in the early 2000s 125

Figure 7.1. Structural and agency factors assumed to influence time management in compulsory education 159

ILLUSTRATIONS

Illustration 1.1. Lunch break in an all-day primary school located in southern Switzerland, run by Catholic nuns from Suore di San Giuseppe in Italy, for children of Italian workers, 1919. (Congregazione delle Suore di San Giuseppe, Cuneo. We want to thank the congregazione for allowing us to use this photo.) 17

Illustration 1.2. School education in the interwar period: First grade of a half-day primary school for boys in Dresden, Germany, 1930. (BPK, no. 30021510) 19

Illustration 1.3. Reform-pedagogic-oriented childcare in the interwar period: Coeducative age-mixed group of preschool children playing with wood material in a kindergarten of the Pestalozzi-Fröbel-House in Berlin, Germany, 1927. (BPK, no. 30030957) 23

Illustration 1.4. School education in the occupied East during World War II: Mixed-age, coeducational class in a camp of children of resettled Ethnic Germans from Volhynia in Aussig (Protectorate Bohemia), 1940. (BPK, no. 30000876, photograph by Liselotte Purper) 24

Illustration 1.5. After-school care in the postwar period: Wärmestube (literally “Heated Room”) for primary school children that offered a warm lunch after school and a place to do the homework, West Berlin, Germany, 1949. (BPK, no. 30019349) 25

Illustration 1.6. Schooling in postwar Europe: A French coeducative all-day class in the 1950s in a small town in the Basque region. (BPK, no. 50002368) 28

Illustration 1.7. Educational reform in the 1960s and 1970s: “Kinderkollektiv” (Children’s Collective), a group of children in a “storefront daycare center,” organized by parents, Frankfurt/M., West Germany, 1970. (BPK, no. 30001862, photograph by Abisag Tüllmann) 30

Illustration 1.8. All-day education under communism: East German “day school” in Weißenfels. A teacher helps elementary school children with their homework, late 1950s. (BPK, no. 00076938) 32