

JOURNALISM & AND SOCIETY

DENIS MCQUAIL

Los Angeles | London | New Delhi
Singapore | Washington DC

Contents

Preface	xi
1 What is Journalism? How is it Linked to Society?	1
Introduction	1
Origins of journalism	2
The journalism–society link: levels of analysis and theoretical perspectives	5
The main concerns of social theory of journalism	9
Diversity and diversification of journalism	11
Journalism and changing technology: implications for society	13
Defining journalism and the news today	14
The press as an institution	16
The ‘power of the press’	18
What society expects from journalism	20
The self-image of the social role of the press	22
Conclusion: questions to be addressed	24
2 Journalistic Responsibility to Society	27
Introduction	27
Defining journalistic responsibility	28
Publication and the public interest	30
The foundations of journalistic obligation	33
Free press theory	34
Journalism as meeting essential needs of society	37
The press as Fourth Estate	39
The idea of a ‘public sphere’	41
Social responsibility theory	42
Critical theory	45
Minority media theory; democratic-participant theory	47
New movements in journalism	48
Internet news theory	49
Looking for a structure in social theory of the press	51
Conclusion	52

3	Principles of Journalistic Performance	54
	Introduction	54
	Basic publication values affecting the public interest	55
	Truth as a principle	57
	Freedom as a principle	61
	Equality, diversity and solidarity as principles	64
	Order and cohesion as principles for journalism	68
	Conclusion	71
4	Towards a Framework of Analysis for Journalism	73
	Introduction	73
	Alternative approaches	75
	On journalism as a profession: a unifying approach	79
	Does journalism have its own 'ideology'?	84
	The occupational roles of journalism	85
	Conflicts and mixed expectations	87
	Demand versus supply of news	90
	Changing goals and types of journalism	92
	If not a profession, at least a 'public occupation'?	93
	Conclusion	94
5	The Central Role of Monitor and Messenger	96
	Introduction	96
	The main roles or functions of the press	97
	The monitor and messenger role characterised	98
	Objectivity as a guiding principle	100
	Limitations to objectivity	102
	Degrees of purpose and activity in objective news journalism	103
	Tensions internal to the monitorial role	105
	The monitorial role and state power	106
	The monitorial role and democracy	108
	Sources of bias in the monitorial role	112
	'Media logic' and 'mediatisation' effects on monitoring	114
	Conclusion	116
6	Media Structure, Performance and the 'Power of the Press'	118
	Introduction	118
	What is a media system?	119
	Influences from social structure on media systems	120
	Political factors	122

Economic factors	124
Social-cultural influences	127
Media system influences on journalism	128
Influences at the level of organisation	131
The question of press effects on society	136
Informational effects of news	138
Persuasion and influence via news	141
Effects on behaviour in society – individual and collective	142
In overview: primary determinants of the ‘power of the press’	143
Conclusion	146
7 The Accountability of Journalism to Society	148
Introduction	148
The main issues of regulation and accountability	149
Journalistic responsibility	151
The accountability of journalism	153
Lines of accountability of journalism	155
Forms of governance and accountability applied to journalism	157
Mechanisms of accountability: external	158
Mechanisms of accountability: internal	161
Informal and ‘illegitimate’ mechanisms of control/accountability	163
Three frames of accountability relationship	164
Accountability in overview	167
Conclusion	169
8 Changing Media Technology: Consequences for Journalism, Press Institution and Relations with Society	171
Introduction	171
The potential of the internet and other new media	172
Problematic aspects of media change	174
Initial signs of change	176
The internet: liberating promise unfulfilled?	178
Effects of media change on journalism itself	181
The future of the press institution	184
The journalism–society relationship	186
The question of trust	188
Consequences for the public sphere	189
In overview	192
Conclusion	194

9 In Conclusion: Striking a Normative Balance	196
Introduction	196
A frame of reference for journalism and society	197
Normative contexts and choices: different levels of application	199
Journalism in an information society	200
The main normative issues of journalism and society in review	202
Towards a universal normative theory of journalism?	211
The consequences of ongoing changes in media technology and structure for normative relations between journalism and society	213
What can be done? Reflections on the chances for better journalism	215
Last word	219
 Appendix: Selected Documents Relating to Rights and Obligations of News Media	221
§1 Examples of international norms	221
§2 Examples of national legal enactments relating to rights and obligations of the press	224
§3 Voluntary codes of conduct and ethics adopted by associations of journalism	228
§4 National regulation of broadcast news	230
§5 Independent self-regulation of the press at national level	232
 References	236
Index	242