

Contents

List of figures	ix
List of tables	xi
Foreword	xiii
Preface	xix
Acknowledgments	xxv
1 The old psychology of leadership: Great men and the cult of personality	1
Leadership in history: The “great man” and his charisma	2
The political decline of the “great man” approach: The impact of the “great dictators”	5
The standardization of leadership: Personality models and their failings	7
The biographical approach: Looking for the roots of greatness in personal histories	10
The theoretical deficiency of individualistic models	12
The political deficiency of individualistic models	14
The faulty definition of leadership	16
Conclusion: Five criteria for a useful psychology of leadership	17
2 The current psychology of leadership: Issues of context and contingency, transaction and transformation	21
The importance of context and contingency	22
The importance of followers	28
The importance of that “special something”	38
Conclusion: The need for a new psychology of leadership	42

3	Foundations for the new psychology of leadership: Social identity and self-categorization	45
	Social identity and group behavior	46
	Social identity and collective power	60
	Defining social identities	64
	Conclusion: Setting the agenda for a new psychology of leadership	73
4	Being one of us: Leaders as in-group prototypes	77
	The importance of standing for the group	78
	Prototypicality and leadership effectiveness	82
	Prototypicality and leadership stereotypes	94
	Prototypicality and the creativity of leaders	103
	Conclusion: To lead us, leaders must represent "us"	106
5	Doing it for us: Leaders as in-group champions	109
	The importance of fairness	111
	From fairness to group interest	118
	Clarifying the group interest	130
	Conclusion: To engage followers, leaders' actions and visions must promote group interests	132
6	Crafting a sense of us: Leaders as entrepreneurs of identity	137
	The complex relationship between reality, representativeness, and leadership	138
	Social identities as world-making resources	143
	Who can mobilize us? The importance of defining category prototypes	147
	Who is mobilized? The importance of defining category boundaries	155
	What is the nature of mobilization? The importance defining category content	159
	Conclusion: Leaders are masters not slaves of identity	162
7	Making us matter: Leaders as embedders of identity	165
	Identity as a moderator of the relationship between authority and power	166
	Leaders as artists of identity	171
	Leaders as impresarios of identity	179

Leaders as engineers of identity 188

Conclusion: Leadership and the production of power both center on the hard but rewarding work of identity management 192

8 Identity leadership at large: Prejudice, practice, and politics 197

The prejudice of leadership 198

The practice of leadership 205

The politics of leadership 215

Notes 219

References 223

Glossary 245

Index of leaders and leadership contexts 253

Author index 257

Subject index 263