

“In this thoughtful and penetrating inquiry, Henry Rosemont Jr. undertakes the formidable challenge of confronting and rejecting the individualist doctrines that provide the foundation for the ethical theories that dominate Western discourse and moral judgment, arguing instead for a ‘role-bearing’ conception derived from Confucian thought and practice. A rewarding and thought-provoking study, reaching broadly to crucial issues of contemporary concern.”

—Noam Chomsky

HENRY ROSEMONT JR. is George B. and Willma Reeves Distinguished Professor emeritus of the Liberal Arts at St. Mary's College of Maryland, consulting professor at Fudan University in Shanghai, and visiting scholar in religious studies at Brown University.