

Contents

Acknowledgements — IX

Abbreviations of Titles — XI

Part I

Chapter 1

Writing the Reader — 3

Four Approaches to Reading — 8

The Significance of the Quixotic Reader's Gender — 15

The Quixotic Plot — 18

Self-Reflexivity Revisited — 25

Chapter 2

The Reader in the Text: Dramatizing Literary Communication — 30

The Projection of Reading Stances — 33

Narratorial Commentary and the Performance of Authorship — 41

Part II

Chapter 3

The Ambivalent Rise of the Novel Reader: Charlotte Lennox's

The Female Quixote* — 55

Novel, Romance, and Reading around 1750 — 57

Sex, Violence, and Arabella: Debating the Physical Impact of Reading — 62

Models of Virtue? Lennox and Johnson — 68

Great Expectations? Reading as a Socially Embedded Practice — 78

Probing Problems of Authority and Instruction — 83

Chapter 4

The Institutionalization of Novel Reading: Jane Austen's

Northanger Abbey* — 91

The Uses of Parody: Restructuring the Quixotic Plot — 94

Catherine Morland and the Politics of the Didactic — 101

Reading and the Channelling of Emotions — 109

Consumerism and Communities of Taste — 113

Reconsidering the Defense of the Novel — 118

Chapter 5

Psychologizing Reading as Social Behaviour: Mary Elizabeth Braddon's

The Doctor's Wife* — 126

Reading as a Bad Habit: Idleness and Licentiousness — 130

Isabel Sleaford and Emma Bovary — 135

Young Isabel and Reading as Compensation — 142

Isabel and Roland: The Temptations of Companionship — 149

Intertextuality Reloaded — 155

Sigmund Smith: Sensation Fiction and the Pleasures of Reading — 159

Part III

Chapter 6

Looking Forward, Looking Back: Novel Reading in the Twenty-First Century — 169

Chapter 7

Taking Stock of the Novel Reader's History: Ian McEwan's

Atonement* — 175

Briony as a Quixotic Reader/Writer and the Problem of Cognition — 176

Achieving Atonement? Briony's Ethics of Storytelling — 181

Narrative Situation(s) and the Ethics of Form — 187

Atonement as Homage and Challenge to the History of the Novel — 191

Cecilia and Robbie: The Sacralization of Reading — 195

Chapter 8

The Nostalgic Future of Novel Reading: Alan Bennett's

The Uncommon Reader* — 201

The Quixote in Reverse — 202

Common and Uncommon Readers — 208

From the London Review of Books to the Internet: Medial Environments and Reading as Cultural Affiliation — 213

Emphasizing Medial Difference: The Uncommon Reader and Stephen Frears's The Queen — 220

Concluding Remarks — 225

Works Cited — 234

Index of Names — 254