

WHEN THEY READ
WHAT WE WRITE

The Politics of Ethnography

Edited by Caroline B. Brettell

BERGIN & GARVEY
Westport, Connecticut • London

CONTENTS

Introduction: Fieldwork, Text, and Audience CAROLINE B. BRETTELL	1
Part I. Contested Texts: Implications for Fieldwork and Rapport	25
1. Unintended Consequences: The Myth of “The Return” in Anthropological Fieldwork DONA L. DAVIS	27
2. Responding to the Anthropologist: When the Spiritual Baptists of Trinidad Read What I Write about Them STEPHEN D. GLAZIER	37
Part II. Politicized Texts: Insider, Outsider, and Ethnographic Authority	49
3. Involvement, Detachment, and Representation on Corsica ALEXANDRA JAFFE	51
4. Fieldwork in Quebec, Scholarly Reviews, and Anthropological Dialogues RICHARD HANDLER	67

5. The Student of Culture and the Ethnography of Irish Intellectuals ELIZABETH A. SHEEHAN	75
Part III. Mediated Texts: Issues of Representation and Identity	91
6. Whose History Is It? Selection and Representation in the Creation of a Text CAROLINE B. BRETTELL	93
7. When They Read What the Papers Say We Wrote OFRA GREENBERG	107
Part IV. Collaborative Texts: Ethics, Negotiation, and Compromise	119
8. Is Anonymity Possible? Writing about Refugees in the United States MARYCAROL HOPKINS	121
9. Just Stories of Ethnographic Authority RICHARD P. HORWITZ	131
10. Myths of Objectivity and the Collaborative Process in Life History Research SALLY MCBETH	145
11. The Case of Mistaken Identity: Problems in Representing Women on the Right FAYE GINSBURG	163
Bibliography	177
Index	193
About the Editor and Contributors	199