

Contents

List of figures	page vi
List of contributors	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction: 'encountering science' Roger Luckhurst and Josephine McDonagh	1
1 Voice, technology and the Victorian ear Steven Connor	16
2 The microscope: mediations of the sub-visible world Isobel Armstrong	30
3 'Thinking blues': the memory of colour in nineteenth-century photography Lindsay Smith	55
4 Cross-cultural encounters: the co-production of science and literature in mid-Victorian periodicals Paul White	75
5 Imitation of life: science, literature and the dissemination of culture David Amigoni	96
6 Passages in the invention of the psyche: mind-reading in London, 1881–84 Roger Luckhurst	117
7 Darwin's barnacles: mid-century Victorian natural history and the marine grotesque Rebecca Stott	151
8 Woman's Share in Primitive Culture : science, femininity and anthropological knowledge Lynnette Turner	182
9 From The New Werther to numbers and arguments: Karl Pearson's eugenics Carolyn Burdett	204
Index	233