

Table of Contents

Preface	7
Introduction	9
Chapter 1 Migrants: Who Are They?	13
Migrants in the World: A Brief Overview	13
The Diversity of Migratory Paths: Some Examples	15
The Situation of Immigrants in the Host Country	22
Chapter 2 Relations with the Host Country	27
The Legal Framework of Immigration	27
Prevailing Attitudes in the Host Country towards Cultural or Racial Differences	30
The Adaptability of Immigrants' Values and References	31
Chapter 3 Transfers	33
Typology	33
The Value and Impact of Transfers	34
Prospects	39
Chapter 4 Relations with the Home Country	43
Relations with the Community of Origin	43
The Attitude of Home-Country Governments	45
Chapter 5 Ways and Means of Capitalising on Immigrants' Contributions to the Development of their Home Countries	47
In the Host Country	48
In the Home Country	54
The Need for Co-ordination	57
Conclusion	61
Synoptic Presentation of the Communities Studied and Their Contributions to the Development of Their Countries of Origin	67
Bibliographical References	71