

“No one is better able to make such a contribution to Islam and Gender Studies than Badran.”

Amina Wadud – Professor of Islamic Studies and author of Inside the Gender Jihad: Women's Reform in Islam.

“An authoritative and comprehensive study of feminisms in Islamic contexts, combining rigorous scholarship with moving biographical narrative.”

Abdullahi A. An-Naim – Charles Howard Candler Professor of Law at Emory University School of Law

“A fascinating, accessible book for both students and experts in Islamic Feminism. It covers the topic vertically and horizontally, historically and geographically.”

Nasr Abu-Zayd – Ibn Rushd Emeritus Chair in Islam and Humanism at the University of Humanistics, Utrecht

Many in the West regard feminism and Islam as a contradiction in terms. However, this is a grave misconception as Margot Badran illustrates in this career-spanning collection of influential essays. Born of over three decades of work, Feminism in Islam traces the history and interaction of both secular and Islamic feminisms in Muslim societies since the nineteenth century.

Written by one of the world's foremost experts on the subject, this landmark volume is informed by numerous interviews, letters, and memoirs of Muslim women, both historical and current. Combining both original and previously published contributions, Badran paints an engaging portrait of feminism in the Islamic world, its achievements to date, and the challenges it will face in years to come.

Margot Badran is a Senior Fellow at the Center for Muslim Christian Understanding, Georgetown University, US. She is also currently a fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Washington, D.C. She has written several works on Feminism in Islam, including Feminists, Islam and Nation: Gender and the Making of Modern Egypt.
