

Contents

	List of figures	page	xii
	Acknowledgments		xvii
	List of abbreviations		xix
i	String games		i
	Thinking through things		i
	In the presence of the past		9
	Imperial baggage		n
2	Objects of exploration		18
	The National Museums of Scotland		18
	The Hunterian Museum		21
	Following the thread		24
	The Pacific voyages of Captain James Cook		26
	Cook's collecting in New Zealand		31
	Artificial curiosities: Maori artefacts in eighteenth-century Britain		37
	Loose threads: Cook artefacts in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries		43
3	Objects of knowledge		49
	A Highland tour: Banks' voyage of discovery to Scotland		50
	'Singularity, chance and the shuffle of things': eighteenth-century museums		60
	Artefacts and the 'science of Man'		66
	Artefacts and the passions		70
4	Improvement and imperial exchange		74
	Museums, Improvement and Scottish migration		74
	Exploitation and exchange: early collecting in New Zealand		81
	European visits to New Zealand 1773-1800		82

	'Gifts' of civilisation: early settlement and Maori travel	88
	Improving people: the arrival of the missionaries	95
	The first mission to New Zealand	97
	'Heathen idols': artefacts and evangelism	104
5	Colonial baggage	107
	Museums and early ethnology	109
	Adam Smith, New Zealand and imperial exchange	112
	Trading networks and the entanglement of exchange	115
	Humanitarian movements and imperial paternalism	118
	The Treaty and 'the gift'	120
	Wakefield, Adam Smith and scientific colonisation	126
	Systematic colonisation: Wakefield and the science of Man	127
	The first Wakefield settlements in New Zealand	132
	'A new Britain in the South Seas': the Scottish settlement of Otago	137
6	'Storehouses of science'	142
	Early museums and ethnology in New Zealand	143
	The Great Exhibition of 1851	148
	Tangible knowledge: museums and object-based epistemologies	153
	The Industrial Museum of Scotland	156
	Geological origins of the National Museum of Antiquities	159
	New Zealand museums and scientific exchanges with Europe	164
	James Hector and scientific exchange between Britain and New Zealand	167
	The Canterbury Museum and debates on Maori antiquity	172
7	Trophies and souvenirs	179
	Highlanders and Maori: war, collecting and the imposition of colonial rule	179
	The savage sublime: recreational travel and collecting	184
	The beginnings of Highland tourism	185
	Walter Scott and the 'invention' of Highland tradition	186
	Early tourism in New Zealand	189

	Ethnology and cultural revival: tourism and the Dominion Museum	198
	Highland romance, Maori and the 'invention' of tradition	203
8	Things and words	210
	The scheme of things: museums in the heyday of artefact-based research	213
	The science of collecting: museums and anthropology in Britain	214
	Anthropology, Arts and Crafts and the 1906-7 Christchurch Exhibition	220
	The Dominion Museum expeditions 1919-22	227
	Places of memory: folklife, history and ethnology in historical museums	238
	Folklife to social history in Britain	241
	The noble pioneer: settler histories and Maori segregation	245
	From storehouses of science to places of memory	247
9	Words and things	257
	Structuralism and beyond: the second 'linguistic turn'	258
	After structuralism	264
	'Material culture' as text: museums and the linguistic turn	267
	'Te Papa - Our Place': the Museum of New Zealand	270
	The Museum of Scotland	281
	Conclusion	286
	Appendix: Provenance of Cloaks in the National Museums of Scotland and the Hunterian Museum	291
	Bibliography	295
	Index	321