

Media, War, and Terrorism

Responses from the Middle East and Asia

Edited by Peter van der Veer and Shoma Munshi

Contents

Notes on contributors	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii

1 Introduction	1
PETER VAN DER VEER
2 War propaganda and the liberal public sphere	9
PETER VAN DER VEER
3 The West and the Rest: a drama in two acts and an epilogue	22
LARRY GROSS AND SASHA COSTANZA-CHOCK
4 Television in the United States from 9/11 and the US's continuing 'War on Terror': single theme, multiple media lenses	46
SHOMA MUNSHI
5 The Middle East's democracy deficit and the expanding public sphere	61
DALE F. EICKELMAN
6 Political Islam in Iran and the emergence of a religious public sphere: the impact of September 11	74
MAHMOUD ALINEJAD
7 September 11 and after: pressure for regulation and self-regulation in the Indian media	118
MANOJ JOSHI

8 The Jewish hand: the response of the Jamaat-e-Islami Hind	137
IRFAN AHMAD
9 The WTC tragedy and the US attack on Afghanistan: the press joins in beating the war drums	155
TJAHJO PURNOMO WIJADI
10 War, words, and images	187
GOENAWAN MOHAMAD
11 When Osama and friends came a-calling: the political deployment of the overdetermined image of Osama ben Laden in the contestation for Islamic symbols in Malaysia	197
FARISH A. NOOR
12 Some 'Muslims' within: watching television in Britain after September 11	224
ASU AKSOY
Index	251