

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
List of Maps	13
List of Figures	15
Chapter I. Introduction	19
1.1 Research questions	20
1.2 Current state of research	21
1.3 Methodology and sampling	22
1.3.1 Semi-structured questionnaire	23
1.3.2 Quantitative questionnaire	24
1.3.3 Sampling and data processing	25
1.4 Outline	29
Chapter II. Theoretical framework	31
2.1 Neoclassical economic theory	31
2.2 The new economics of labor migration	35
2.3 Dual/Segmented labor market theory	36
2.4 World-systems theory	36
2.5 Migration networks theory	37
2.6 Theoretical synthesis	39
Chapter III. Greeks in Georgia: historical, spatial, and socio-cultural characteristics	41
3.1 Settlement history	41

3.2 Ethnic structure and ethno-demographic processes	44
3.2.1 Russian Empire	48
3.2.2 The Soviet Union	48
3.2.2.1 Trends in the rural-urban distribution	51
3.2.3 Independent Georgia	52
3.3 Kvemo Kartli	54
3.4 Samtskhe-Javakheti	60
3.5 Abkhazia	64
3.6 Adjara	69

Chapter IV. The Greek Community of Georgia and Soviet repressions	75
4.1 1928–33 Dekulakization	77
4.2 1937–38 NKVD's Greek Operation	79
4.3 Deportations	82

Chapter V. Emigration from Georgia	87
5.1 Labor migration: the most important factor	89
5.1.1 (Un)Employment: background and current rates	92
5.1.2 Poverty	97
5.2 Emigration routes and country comparisons	101
5.2.1 Main vectors of emigration	101
5.2.2 Comparison of GDP per capita (PPP)	107
5.2.3 Comparison of labor markets	108
5.2.4 Average wages	109
5.3 Ethnicity and socio-economic ties: aspects of privilege and (dis)advantages in origin and destination countries	110
5.3.1 Post-Soviet nationalist challenges in Georgia	111

5.3.2 Greek migration policy and “privileged labor migration”	113
5.3.3 The Russian vector and the importance of socio-cultural background	117
Chapter VI. Discussion	121
Chapter VII. Conclusion	125
Bibliography	127
Appendix	139