

List of Figures	vii
List of Tables	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	xiii
1 The Idea of Civil Society from Early Modern to Contemporary Social Thought in the West	1
2 The Idea of Civil Society in the Chinese Context	47
3 Government Policy and State Control of the Internet in China	81
4 Historical Development of the Internet in China	119
5 Communication, Empowerment, and the Emergence of Network Public Opinion in Chinese Cyberspace	161
6 A School Explosion, a Fatal Virus, and the Internet Factor	209
7 Online Activism, Internet Protest, and Social Movements in Cyber China	255
Conclusion	287
Notes	293
Bibliography (English)	315
Bibliography (Chinese)	339
Index	341

- Figure 4.1. Growth of Internet users in China (1994–2005).
- Figure 4.2. Growth of Internet-connected computers (1997–2005).
- Figure 4.3. Internet bandwidth growth (1997–2005).
- Figure 4.4. Growth of registered domain names in China (1997–2005) (excluding .edu domain names).
- Figure 4.5. Growth in the number of Web sites (1997–2005).
- Figure 4.6. Growth patterns in gender distribution (1997–2005).
- Figure 4.7. Growth pattern in users' educational background (1998–2005).
- Figure 4.8. Change in age distribution of China's Internet population (1999–2005).
- Figure 4.9. Regional distribution of Internet resources versus population (as of 2004).
- Figure 4.10. Leading provinces and metropolises in China's Internet development (as of 2004).