

Contents

Part I He Always Knew What Was Right for Him

1 The Person	3
1.1 The Aristocrat.....	3
1.2 The Natural Philosopher	13
2 Normality, Abnormality, and Scientists	17
2.1 Psychology of Scientists	17
2.2 Scientists, Psychology, and Biography	19
2.3 Problem of Cavendish	21
3 Everyday Life	25
3.1 Appearance.....	27
3.2 Speech and Silence.....	29
3.3 Feelings	32
3.4 Strangers, Shyness, and Solitude	35
3.5 Women	37
3.6 Regularity and Routine	38
3.7 House and Servants	39
3.8 Wealth.....	52
3.9 Religion.....	54
3.10 Death	56
4 Life of Natural Philosophy	59
4.1 Physical World	59
4.2 Mathematical and Musical Mind	62
4.3 Senses.....	67
4.4 Objectivity.....	70
4.5 Accuracy, Precision, and Perfection.....	72
4.6 Knowledge and Truth.....	77
4.7 Publication and Writing	79
4.8 Scientific Society.....	86

4.9	Talent and Recognition.....	92
4.10	Way of Life.....	93
5	Aspects of Personality	97
5.1	Complexity	97
5.2	Dealing with People	100
6	Views of Cavendish	107
6.1	Interpretations	107
6.2	Feelings	113
7	Eccentricity	115
8	Autism.....	135
9	Conclusion	149
9.1	Personality and Science.....	149
9.2	Nervous Disorders and Eccentricity.....	150
9.3	Shyness and Introversion	152
9.4	Autism and Other Disorders.....	155
9.5	How Do We Talk About Cavendish?	161
 Part II He Saw What Interested Him
10	The Traveler.....	167
10.1	Travel Writings in the Eighteenth Century	168
10.2	The Journeys	173
10.3	Working Iron	187
10.4	Journeys and Science	190
10.5	Journey of 1785.....	194
10.6	Synopsis of Journal of 1785	199
10.7	Summary of Part II.....	226
 Part III Some Supplementary Materials on Cavendish’s Life
11	Journal of 1785	231
12	Cavendish and Grey Family Trees.....	251
13	Letters Between Brothers: Henry and Frederick Cavendish.....	259
14	Cavendish’s Houses: Clapham Common and Bedford Square	263
15	Cavendishes, Lowthers, and Holker Hall	275
16	Autism, Background	289
17	Physical Theory and Theory of Autism	293
Bibliography		295
Index.....		305