

Contents

Acknowledgments xi

CHAPTER 1. Introduction: The Biological Perspective and the Problem of a Modern Nature 1

Identity, Mobility, and Place 8

Popular Science and Populist Natural History 15

The Biological Perspective and the History of Biology 20

Ghosts and Shadows 25

Tracing the Biological Perspective 31

CHAPTER 2. Bringing Life to Natural History 35

Practical and Popular Natural History 35

The Taxidermic Life 38

Against the "Terrorism of System": Martin on Taxidermic

Displays 50

Stuttgart: Representing Nature for the Fatherland 56

Commercial Displays: Nature as Spectacle 61

Bringing Nature's Past to Life 67

Public/Private, Science/Art, Elite/Popular: Natural History

Institutions and Values 74

CHAPTER 3. The World in Miniature: Practical Natural History and the Zoo Movement 79

The Zoo as a Cultural Institution 83

Designing a World in Miniature 92

Caring for Animals: From Daily Life to Nature
Protection	107
The Circulation of People and Ideas	117
Conclusion	123

CHAPTER 4. From Practice to Theory: Karl Möbius and the Lebensgemeinschaft 125

Karl Möbius: Upwardly Striving Youth	127
Natural History in Hamburg	130
Natural History Activist	132
The Fauna of the Kiel Fjord	138
From Hamburg to Kiel	145
The Oyster and Oyster-Culture	152
Conclusion: Social Mobility and Ecological
Theory	158

CHAPTER 5. The “Living Community” in the Classroom 161

Natural History and School Reform	165
Friedrich Junge and The Village Pond	173
The Spread of the Village Pond Gospel	181
The Village Pond Curriculum as Heimatkunde	192
Conclusion	195

CHAPTER 6. Reforming the Natural History Museum, 1880–1900 198

The Emergence of the Professional Curator	203
The Institutional Landscape	214
Dual Arrangement	223
The Museum as a Center for Biological Knowledge	240
Conclusion	246

CHAPTER 7. Biological Groups, Nature, and Culture in the Museum	251
The Kunde Projects	253
The Museum für Natur-, Völker-, und Handelskunde in Bremen (1896)	257
The Altona City Museum (1901) and Heimatkunde	268
The Museum für Meereskunde (1906)	278
Biological Groups, Modernity, and the Representation of Nature	289
CHAPTER 8. From Biology to Ecology	293
Biologie and Secondary School Reform	295
Biologie as Popular Natural History	307
From Biology to Ecology	314
Pedagogical, Popular, and Professional Ecology	320
CHAPTER 9. Museum Research and the Rise of Ecological Animal Geography	323
Exploring Life in the Ocean	325
Making Animal Geography Ecological	333
Ecological versus Historical Zoogeography	344
Ecological Animal Geography and the German Natural History Museum	352
CHAPTER 10. Modern Nature	355
Bibliography	369
Index	413