

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	vii
Abbreviations	ix
1. Introduction: ideas, individuals, identities and institutions	1
2. Why disciplinary histories matter	11
3. A tale of two departments? Oxford and the LSE	29
4. The politics of disciplinary professionalisation	49
5. Anthropology at the end of empire	69
6. Tribes and territories	93
7. How not to apply anthropological knowledge: the RAI and its 'friends'	113
8. Anthropologists and 'race': social research in post-colonial Britain	129
9. Discipline on the defensive?	149
10. The uses of academic identity	173
Appendix. Disciplining the archives	183
Bibliography	189
Index	205