

Contents

Acknowledgments — VII

1 Introduction — 1

2 The Consolidation of Spanish Democracy and the National Identity Debate — 8

- 2.1 Current Trends in Spanish Nationalist Historiography — 8
- 2.2 Teaching the Nation — 19
- 2.3 The New Spain — 27
- 2.4 Concluding Remarks — 39

3 Spanish Foreign Policy towards Israel and the Arab States — 40

- 3.1 General Considerations — 40
- 3.2 Spain and Israel — 40
 - 3.2.1 Getting Closer — 40
 - 3.2.2 Strategies, Prejudices and Foreign Policy — 45
 - 3.2.3 Preliminary Conclusions — 52
- 3.3 Spain and the Arab World — 52
 - 3.3.1 Formative Years — 52
 - 3.3.2 Culture as Power — 56
 - 3.3.3 Spain's Energy Dependency — 59
 - 3.3.4 Constructing a New Role for the New Spanish Self — 60
 - 3.3.5 The Friend as Other — 64
- 3.4 Concluding Remarks — 66

4 Spain and the Jews — 69

- 4.1 The Jews of Spain: Between Normalization and Invisibility — 69
 - 4.1.1 Antisemitism: The Spanish Way — 81
- 4.2 Spanish Newspapers, Philo-Semitism and Anti-Jewish Mythology (1997–2006) — 89
 - 4.2.1 El País: A View from the Center-Left — 89
 - 4.2.2 ABC: The Conservative Shift — 101
 - 4.2.3 El Mundo: In the Footsteps of the Jew? — 109
- 4.3 Concluding Remarks — 114

5 Spain and the Muslims — 118

- 5.1 Immigration and the Revival of the Spanish Muslim Community — 118
- 5.2 Islamophobia and Border Anxiety — 128
- 5.3 The Construction of Muslims in Spanish Newspapers (1997–2006) — 136
 - 5.3.1 El País: Supporting the “Alliance of Civilizations” — 136
 - 5.3.2 ABC and Islam: From Ally to Enemy — 147
 - 5.3.3 El Mundo’s Pragmatism — 163
- 5.4 Concluding Remarks — 171

6 Final Conclusions — 174

Bibliography — 177

Index — 187