

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
Introduction: Fashion and materiality Heike Jenss and Viola Hofmann	1
Section One Fashion and clothing: Materials in time and place
Introduction	13
1 Material subjects: Making place, making time through fashion Susan B. Kaiser	21
2 Dressed lives: Biography, emotion, and materiality Christel Köhle-Hezinger	38
3 The discovery of materiality: Archeological clothing finds, representation, and knowledge formation Daniel Devoucoux	59
4 Appropriating the world through clothing: Christoph Kress's foreign dress collection Jutta Zander-Seidel	78
Section Two Materiality in motion: Global circuits of fashion
Introduction	97
5 Chinoiserie in fashion: Material images circulating between China and Europe Daniel Leonhard Purdy	105
6 Tradition in fashion: Golden embroidery and the crafting of heritage in Bukhara Lola Shamukhitdinova	123
7 "Our dress": Chitenge as Zambia's national fabric Karen Tranberg Hansen	140
8 "Made in China": Material meanderings of fast-fashion cities Christina H. Moon	157

Section Three	Materiality and embodiment
	Introduction	175
9	Sensorial cosmologies: Fashion design and the embodied practices of the wearer Leyla Belkaïd-Neri	181
10	The left-hand pose: Alchemic realism and the intra-action of music, body, and dress in metal yoga Otto von Busch	198
11	"Feeling premium": Athleisure and the material transformation of sportswear Jennifer Craik	214
Section Four	Material exchanges: Fashion and migration
	Introduction	233
12	International fashion shows: Creating transcultural relationships through clothing Andrea Hauser	241
13	Entangled histories: Fashion and the politics of migration Elke Gaugele	260
Notes on contributors		277
Index		283

Figures

- 1.1 Marchers make place (Washington, DC) and time (January 21, 2017) for women's rights. Photo: Mario Tama/ Getty Images 22
- 1.2 A woman at the women's march in Berlin (January 21, 2017) wears an American flag as a headscarf, similar to the poster nearby. With her own sign, she reminds us that material subjects have agency as they move through space and articulate intersectionality (e.g., gender, ethnicity, religion, nation). Photo: Steffi Loos/ Getty Images 24
- 1.3 The Mothers of the Movement (whose sons have died because of gun violence) foster a bridge between Black Lives Matter and women's rights at the march on Washington, DC. Four wear pink pussy hats. Photo: Noam Galal/ Getty Images 33
- 2.1 Marie Frech, portrait taken in photo studio Utz in Fellbach around 1920. Photo: ©StadtMuseum Fellbach 41
- 2.2 Marie Frech (née Ebinger) and her husband Wilhelm Frech on their wedding day in front of their house in Fellbach, 1933. Photo: ©StadtMuseum Fellbach 43
- 2.3 Marie Frech's clothes hanging above books by Michael Hahn in her bedroom. Photo taken for the exhibition of her house in Fellbach (1995). Photo: ©StadtMuseum Fellbach 46
- 2.4 Marie Frech shown as an older woman, in front of her harmonium. Photo: ©StadtMuseum Fellbach 55
- 3.1 Floral collar from Tutankhamun's embalming cache (ca. 1336–1327 BCE). Photo: Metropolitan Museum of Art 62
- 3.2 Limestone youth (early sixth century BCE) dressed in Egyptian kilt or shenti. Photo: Metropolitan Museum of Art 64
- 3.3 Embroidered chasuble back out of Italian velvet (late fourteenth century). Photo: Los Angeles County Museum of Art 69
- 4.1 Posthumous portrait of Christoph Kress (copper engraving, around 1700). Photo: Germanisches Nationalmuseum 79

- 4.2 Turkish garment collected in the Kunstkammern, donated to the Nuremberg Public Library (around 1683). Photo: Germanisches Nationalmuseum 86
- 4.3 “Turco di grado in casa,” illustration in Cesare Vecellio’s costume book, 1598. Photo: Germanisches Nationalmuseum 87
- 5.1 Peter Paul Rubens’ portrait of Nicholas Trigault, a Flemish Jesuit missionary in China, 1617. The portrait was painted while Trigault visited the city of Antwerp for fund-raising purposes. He wears a Korean cap and the robe of a Chinese scholar. Photo: Metropolitan Museum of Art 106
- 5.2 Gown à la française with a chinoiserie pattern. Silk satin with silk and metal thread. Amsterdam, Netherlands (1740–1760). Photo: Los Angeles County Museum of Art 108
- 5.3 Man’s at-home robe (banyan); robe from the Netherlands dated 1750–1760, made from Chinese textile, silk satin and silk plain weave (damassé) dated 1700–1750. Photo: Los Angeles County Museum of Art 117
- 6.1 The golden embroidery process in Zarkon factory, Bukhara (2013). Photo: Lola Shamukhitdinova 130
- 6.2 The opening of the fashion show and national dress contest during Tashkent Art Week (2013). Photo: Lola Shamukhitdinova 134
- 6.3 Skullcaps sold at the bazaar in old Bukhara (2013). Photo: Lola Shamukhitdinova 135
- 7.1 Coat of arms, the Republic of Zambia 142
- 7.2 Zambian women wearing chitenge. Postage stamp drawn by Zambian artist Gabriel Ellison (1972). Photo: Karen Tranberg Hansen 143
- 7.3 Women dressed for a party: one (left) in tailor-made office wear, and three in chitenge outfits (the second woman from the left wears a “Nigerian boubou,”) Lusaka (2002). Photo: Karen Tranberg Hansen. Previously published in: Karen Tranberg Hansen. 2017. “From Grandmother’s Dress to the Fashion Runway. Chitenge Styles in Zambia.” In African-Print Fashion Now! A Story of Taste, Globalization, and Style, edited by Suzanne Gott, Kristyne S. Loughran, Betsy D. Quick, and Leslie W. Rabine, 160–61. Los Angeles: Fowler Museum at UCLA 147

- 8.1 Spools of thread to make textiles, Hong Kong (June, 2015). Photo: Christina Moon 164
- 8.2 Exterior of migrant residence in Baishizhou village (June, 2015). Photo: Christina Moon 167
- 8.3 Storefront of a boutique in Shanghai (June, 2015). Photo: Christina Moon 169
- 8.4 "Made in China" on the selvege of fabric, early twentieth century, displayed at the Shanghai Museum of Textiles and Costume at Donghua University. Photo: Christina Moon 172
- 9.1 Setsuko's personal style and creative cosmos, wearing her Phillip Lim T-shirt with "New York City" print. Photo: Leyla Belkaïd-Neri 187
- 9.2 Eleanora wearing her 3.1 Phillip Lim pants as a decommodified fashion object. Photo: Leyla Belkaïd-Neri 189
- 9.3 Johanna wearing her "flying top." Photo: Leyla Belkaïd-Neri 192
- 10.1 Metal Yoga Bones logo. Copyright: Saskia Thode 200
- 10.2 Warmup for metal yoga. Photo: Otto von Busch 204
- 10.3 Group session of metal yoga. Photo: Otto von Busch 210
- 11.1 Detail of activewear by Lululemon. "Classic" sportswear pieces with technological features (flat seams, smooth, stretchable materials, lightweight, permeable/absorbent). Photo: Julie Macindoe 215
- 11.2 Street image of athleisure. Photo: Getty Images 220
- 11.3 Store display of leggings. Photo: Getty Images 226
- 12.1 International Fashion Show, Bremen central station. Photo: Sabine Prioletti 246
- 12.2 Women at the International Fashion Show, Bremen, presenting clothing from or inspired by their home countries. Photo: Sabine Prioletti 248
- 12.3 International Fashion Show, at the community center (Mütterzentrum) in Osterholz-Tenever, Bremen. Photo: ©Mediengruppe Kreiszeitung/ Martin Kowalewski 252
- 13.1 Backstage at Prada fall/winter, 2016, Milan Fashion Week, Italy. Photo: Virginia Arcaro 261
- 13.2 Foulard Untold Renaissance designed by Walé Oyéjidé, After Migration collection fall/winter, 2016. Photo: Ikeré Jones Design Archive 265