

Contents

Preface	7
1 Executive summary	9
2 Objectives and methods	15
2.1 Background and aims	15
2.2 Definitions	17
2.3 Methods	19
3 The volumes of English-taught programmes in individual European countries	21
3.1 Countries participating in the study	22
3.2 Proportion of institutions providing English-taught programmes	24
3.3 Proportion of programmes provided in English	26
3.4 Enrolment in English-taught programmes	26
3.5 Leading countries	29
3.6 Development during the past five years	30
4 The institutional context	33
4.1 Level of academic degrees awarded	33
4.2 Student population	35
4.3 Enrolment of international students	36
4.4 Disciplinary profile	39
4.5 Reasons for not offering programmes in English	41
5 Characteristics of English-taught programmes	45
5.1 Subject areas	45
5.2 Degree levels	48
5.3 Duration and admission requirements	49
5.4 Year of introduction	51
5.5 Use of Diploma Supplement	53
5.6 Characteristics of the curriculum	54
5.7 Scholarships and tuition fees	61
5.8 Regional origin of students	63

6	Introduction and operation of English-taught programmes	67
6.1	Motivation	67
6.2	Actors and approaches	70
6.3	Marketing	72
6.4	Language proficiency of students and teachers	75
6.4.1	Students	76
6.4.2	Teachers	80
6.5	Attractiveness of programmes for students	80
6.6	Accreditation and quality assurance	82
6.7	Prior knowledge of students	86
6.8	Student services	87
6.9	Spin-offs and outcomes	89
7	Postscript. Normalcy, at last	91