

Edited and with an introduction by John Thornton Caldwell

---

Electronic Media and Technoculture

---

Rutgers
University
Press
*New Brunswick,
New Jersey*

---

Contents

---

Introduction: Theorizing the Digital Landrush John Thornton Caldwell	1
<hr/>
Theorizing Technohistory: Old Media/New Media
<hr/>
The Technology and the Society Raymond Williams	35
Constituents of a Theory of the Media Hans Magnus Enzensberger	51
Breakages Limited Brian Winston	77
The Work of Culture in the Age of Cybernetic Systems Bill Nichols	90
<hr/>
Producing Technoculture
<hr/>
The Theory of the Virtual Class Arthur Kroker and Michael A. Weinstein	117
The Scene of the Screen: Envisioning Cinematic and Electronic “Presence” Vivian Sobchack	137
Sex, Death, and Machinery, or How I Fell in Love with My Prosthesis Allucquère Rosanne Stone	156
<hr/>
Consuming Technoculture
<hr/>
New Technologies, Audience Measurement, and the Tactics of Television Consumption Ien Ang	183
The Circuit of Technology: Gender, Identity, and Power Cynthia Cockburn	197

Moral Kombat and Computer Game Girls Helen Cunningham	213
Television and the Internet Ellen Seiter	227
<hr/>
Boundaries, Identities, Practice
<hr/>
Hacking Away at the Counterculture Andrew Ross	247
Beyond the Nationalist Panopticon: The Experience of Cyberpublics in India Ravi Sundaram	270
The Virtual Barrio @ The Other Frontier (or the Chicano internetá ) Guillermo Gómez-Peña	295
Annotated Bibliography	309
Contributors	317
Index	321