

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	VII
Foreword by Marie-Soleil Frère	XI
Abbreviations	XVII
Maps	XIX-XX
General Introduction	1
The Argument	1
Historical Background	5
The Argument in Context	6
Kinshasa's Newspapers	17
Expert Interviews	21
Chapter Outline	22
1. Historical Origins of the Rwandophone Discourse	27
1.1 Introduction	27
1.2 Coming to Terms with the Past	28
1.3 The Rwandophones of North Kivu	31
1.3.1 Colonial Confusion and Post-Independence Politics	31
1.3.2 Joseph-Désiré Mobutu Takes Over	41
1.4 The Banyamulenge of South Kivu	49
1.5 Conclusion	56
2. The Emergence of the Rwandophone Discourse during the CNS (1991-1992)	59
2.1 Introduction	59
2.2 The Kinshasa Press	62
2.2.1 Kinois Newspapers as a Historical Source	68
2.3 The Political Context	74
2.4 The 1991 'Identification of Nationals'	78
2.5 The Conférence Nationale Souveraine (1991-1992)	86
2.5.1 The Immediate Repercussions of the CNS	105
2.6 Conclusion	110
3. From Exclusion to Expulsion: the Escalation of the Rwandophone Discourse (March 1993 – July 1996)	113
3.1 Introduction	113
3.2 The War of Masisi	115
3.3 The Rwanda Genocide	127
3.3.1 Hutu and Tutsi	134
3.4 The Vangu Commission	139
3.5 The Impact of the Vangu Commission	150
3.6 The Spectre of a 'Hutuland'	160
3.7 The Banyamulenge Situation	166
3.8 Conclusion	172

4. From the ‘War of Aggression’ to the ‘War of Liberation’ (September 1996 – July 1998)	175
4.1 Introduction	175
4.2 From the ‘War in the East’ to the ‘War of Liberation’	178
4.2.1 The ‘Banyamulenge’ Invaders	179
4.2.2 ‘Out of the Blue’: the Rise of Laurent-Désiré Kabila	191
4.3 The ‘Liberators’ in Power	199
4.3.1 Kabila: ‘Locked in a Cornelian Dilemma’	199
4.3.2 The Kinshasa Experience	204
4.3.3 The AFDL and the Kinois Newspapers	206
4.4 The Continuing Crises in the Kivus	210
4.4.1 ‘Mai-Mai’ and ‘Banyamulenge’	210
4.4.2 The Banyamulenge Mutiny	217
4.5 Kabila and the Kinois Newspapers in the Run Up to the War	223
4.6 The ‘Banyamulenge Question’	230
4.7 Conclusion	234
5. Depoliticising the ‘Banyamulenge Question’ (1998 - 2004)	239
5.1 Introduction	239
5.2 The 1998 ‘Banyamulenge Rebellion’: A Replay of 1996?	242
5.3 The ‘War of the Newspapers’ and the ‘Battle of Kinshasa’	249
5.4 Of War and Peace and the Changing Role of the Newspapers	260
5.5 The Renegotiation of the ‘Banyamulenge’	269
5.5.1 ‘Let Us Identify the Real Enemy’	269
5.5.2 The Nkunda Rebellion	277
5.6 Conclusion	289
6. Final Conclusion	295
7. Bibliography	311
8. Regional Chronology	333
9. Index	337