

CONTENTS

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	ix
PREFACE	xi
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND PERMISSIONS	xv
1 Introduction	1
2 Explaining migration across international borders	52
3 Geographies of migration and work	121
4 Geo-political economies of migration control	180
5 Geographies of migration, citizenship and belonging	239
6 Conclusions	299
CHAPTER NOTES	312
GLOSSARY	322
BIBLIOGRAPHY	329
INDEX	367

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

FIGURES

1.1	The number of migrants ('foreign-born population') in selected non-OECD countries by their percentage of the total population	23
1.2	The number of migrants ('foreign-born population') in selected OECD countries by their percentage of the total population	26
1.3	Twenty-five cities with the largest number of 'foreign-born residents' around the world	32
3.1	'Water, electricity and gas included': 'for rent' signs in Spanish on the east side of Lexington, Kentucky in the United States. Mexican immigrants and those of Central American origin more generally, have settled in cities and towns well beyond America's 'global cities'	140

MAPS

1.1	The Canary Islands and some of the countries involved in the migration to Ceuta and Mellila in northern Morocco	2
3.1	Lesotho and the Free State	170
3.2	Belize and Cow Pen	174

TABLES

1.1	Countries not covered by OECD data with the largest number of migrants by absolute migrant population; by percentage, and same countries in order of the largest number of migrants by percentage of the population, 2006	22
1.2	The total number of migrants ('foreign-born population') in selected OECD countries (in thousands)	24
1.3	The number of migrants ('foreign-born population') in selected OECD countries by percentage of total population, 1996, 2000, and 2005; in order of highest percentage in 2005	25
1.4	The migration of 'foreign nationals', 2003–2005 to selected OECD countries Permanent-type migration (standardized statistics)	27
1.5	Countries with the largest numbers of both 'non-warehoused' and 'warehoused' asylum-seekers and refugees, compared with North American and selected European countries, December 31, 2007	28
1.6	International and/or foreign students in tertiary education, 2000 and 2004 (ranked in order of Total percentage of foreign students of all tertiary enrolment in 2004)	29
2.1	Theoretical approaches to migration and their basic characteristics	107
3.1	Foreign and foreign-born labour force in selected OECD countries, 1999 and 2005 (in thousands and percentages)	124
5.1	The right to vote in local elections in 25 EU countries for 'third country nationals'	289