
Contents

Table of cases page xiii

Table of statutes xix

Preface to the third edition xxiii

Acknowledgments xxvi

- 1 Historical context to migration 1
 - 1.1 Introduction 1
 - 1.2 Historical developments 2
 - 1.2.1 The period before 1778 2
 - 1.2.2 Early white settlement – the first wave 3
 - 1.2.3 The first colonial emigration programs 4
 - 1.2.4 The gold rushes and the second wave 4
 - 1.2.5 Self-government and the ‘White Australia’ policy 6
 - 1.2.6 After the gold rushes 7
 - 1.2.7 The Federation debates 8
 - 1.2.8 Federation and ‘White Australia’ legislation 9
 - 1.2.9 Empire-building – the post-World War I wave 10
 - 1.2.10 Post-World War II 11
 - 1.2.11 Dismantling the ‘White Australia’ policy 12
 - 1.3 The modern immigration debate 13
- 2 Immigration control: An overview 16
 - 2.1 Constitutional foundations 16
 - 2.2 The control model 21
 - 2.3 The advent of current migration legislation 21
 - 2.4 The amended Migration Act 1958 (Cth) and new Migration Regulations 22
- 3 Basic migration legislation and policy 24
 - 3.1 The legislative framework and relationship between the Act and the Regulations 24
 - 3.1.1 Entry, stay and departure 25
 - 3.1.2 The nature of a visa 25
 - 3.1.3 Circumstances and conditions of visa grants 25
 - 3.1.4 Controlling the numbers 26
 - 3.2 The structure of the Migration Regulations 26

3.3	Visa class/visa subclass	29
3.4	Gazette notices	29
3.5	Ministerial policy and departmental policies and procedures	30
3.6	How to locate visa criteria	31
4	The visa system and application procedures	32
4.1	Validity of visa applications	32
4.2	Procedures for dealing with visa applications	38
4.3	Restrictions on visa applications	39
4.4	Family members	44
4.5	Sponsorship and assurance of support	45
4.5.1	Family sponsors and assurers	45
4.5.2	Employer sponsors	46
4.6	Special classes of person	47
4.7	Third-party sources of decision-making power	48
4.8	The DIAC decision-making process	48
4.9	Evidencing the visa	51
4.10	Visa Entitlement Verification Online (VEVO)	51
5	Family and interdependency migration and other Australia-based visas	53
5.1	Overview	53
5.2	Sponsorship, assurances of support and bonds	55
5.2.1	Sponsorship	55
5.2.2	Assurances of support and bonds	57
5.3	Partner visas	57
5.4	Other family visa categories	68
5.4.1	Children	69
5.4.1.1	Child (subclasses 101 and 802)	69
5.4.1.2	Adoption (subclasses 102 and 802)	70
5.4.1.3	Orphan relative (subclasses 117 and 837)	73
5.4.2	Parents	74
5.4.3	Aged dependent relatives (subclasses 114 and 838)	76
5.4.4	Remaining relatives (subclasses 115 and 835)	77
5.4.5	Carer (subclasses 116 and 836)	78
5.4.6	Temporary visas for family members of Australian citizens or permanent residents, or eligible New Zealand citizens	83
6	Business and investment visas	85
6.1	Overview	85
6.2	Business visa classes and subclasses	86
6.3	Sponsorship	87
6.4	Spouses	88
6.5	Onshore applications	88
6.6	Documentation	89

6.7	Common criteria and definitions	89
6.7.1	Age	90
6.7.2	Business skills points test	90
6.7.3	English language skills	90
6.7.4	Acceptable business activities	91
6.7.5	Overall successful business career	91
6.7.6	Ownership interest in a qualifying business	92
6.7.7	Main business	96
6.7.8	Turnover	98
6.7.9	Genuine and realistic commitment	98
6.8	Criteria specific to particular visa subclasses	99
6.8.1	Investment visas (subclasses 162 and 165)	99
6.8.2	Established business (residence) visas (subclasses 845 and 846)	101
6.8.3	Business Owner (Provisional) subclass 163	102
6.8.4	Business Skills (Provisional) subclasses 161 (Senior Executive (Provisional)) and 164 (State/Territory Sponsored Senior Executive (Provisional))	102
6.9	Public interest – health and character requirements	104
7	Skills-based visas	105
7.1	Overview	105
7.2	Visas based on qualifications and/or occupational skills	105
7.2.1	Offshore	109
7.2.2	Onshore	112
7.3	Visas based on employer nominations	115
7.3.1	The Employer Nomination Scheme (ENS)	116
7.3.2	The Regional Sponsored Migration Scheme (RSMS)	117
7.4	Labour agreements	118
7.5	Distinguished talent	120
8	Temporary visas	123
8.1	Overview	123
8.2	Temporary workers	123
8.2.1	Working Holiday (Temporary) (class TZ)	123
8.2.2	Electronic Travel Authority (class UD)	124
8.2.3	Temporary Business Entry (class UC)	125
8.2.4	Short Stay Sponsored (Visitor) (class UL)	128
8.2.5	Medical Practitioner (Temporary) (class UE)	128
8.2.6	Work and Holiday (Temporary) (class US)	128
8.2.7	Domestic Worker (Temporary) (class TG)	129
8.3	Cultural/Social (Temporary) (class TE)	130
8.4	Educational (Temporary) (class TH)	134
8.5	Student visas	136
8.5.1	Student (Temporary) (class TU)	137
8.6	Other temporary visas	139

8.6.1	Subclass 410 (Retirement) (class TQ)	139
8.6.2	Medical Treatment (Visitor) (class UB)	140
9	Miscellaneous visas	141
9.1	Citizenship	141
9.2	Absorbed person visa	143
9.3	Tourists	145
9.3.1	Sponsored Family Visitor (class UL)	146
9.4	Bridging visas	146
9.5	Resident return	149
9.6	Other Australia-based visas	152
9.6.1	Special eligibility	152
9.6.2	Confirmatory (Residence) visa 808	152
9.7	Emergency visas	153
9.8	Other special visa categories	154
10	Common visa requirements	156
10.1	Overview	156
10.2	Health	157
10.3	Character	160
10.4	Exclusion periods and re-entry bans	161
10.5	Visa conditions	161
11	Compliance: Unlawful non-citizens, removal and deportation	165
11.1	Unlawful non-citizens: an overview	165
11.2	Becoming unlawful	166
11.2.1	Overstayers	166
11.2.2	Entry without authority	166
11.2.3	Cancellation of visas	167
11.2.3.1	Cancellation because of inaccurate information	168
11.2.3.2	General cancellation power	168
11.2.3.3	Cancellation of business visa	169
11.2.3.4	(Automatic) cancellation of student visas	170
11.2.3.5	Cancellation on the basis of bad character	170
11.3	Options for unlawful non-citizens	172
11.4	Consequences of being unlawful: removal and deportation	173
11.5	Offences that can be committed by unlawful non-citizens	174
12	History of the Refugees Convention and definitional framework	176
12.1	History of the Convention	176
12.2	The four elements	180
12.3	Protection not a key element: It is external, not internal	180
13	Refugee and humanitarian visas: The statutory structure	182
13.1	Overview	182
13.2	Onshore applications	183

13.3	Offshore applications	186
13.4	General provisions	189
13.4.1	Health	189
13.4.2	Public interest character requirements	190
13.4.3	National interest	190
14	Convention grounds	191
14.1	Overview of grounds	191
14.2	Race	193
14.3	Nationality	195
14.4	Religion	197
14.5	Political opinion	201
14.5.1	Political opinion generally interpreted broadly	202
14.5.2	Political opinion must be known or imputed by the persecutor	203
14.5.3	Political opinion need not be expressed	204
14.5.4	What if the applicant can avoid coming to the notice of authorities?	205
14.5.5	Forms of political opinion	207
14.6	Particular social group	208
14.6.1	Formal test	208
14.6.2	Difficulties in practical application of the test	210
14.6.2.1	Infinite number of personal traits	210
14.6.2.2	Group description is context sensitive	211
14.6.2.3	Persecution and group selection	212
14.6.2.4	The history of drafting the Convention is not a useful guide to identifying a particular social group	212
14.6.2.5	In principle guidance can be sought from the humanitarian underpinning of the Convention	213
14.6.2.6	A humanitarian approach supports an expansive definition of 'particular social group'	214
14.6.2.7	Gaining insight into application by looking at previous paradigm examples of limited utility	214
14.6.2.8	Matters that assist in identifying a particular social group	215
14.6.2.9	Nonchalance and dispassion do not lead to differentiation	215
14.6.3	How to spot a particular social group, applying the existing law – a summary	216
14.6.4	Examples of particular social group claims	217
14.6.5	Statutory change to family as a particular social group	218
15	Persecution	222
15.1	Overview of persecution	222
15.2	Overview of relevant statutory principles	223
15.3	Serious harm	223
15.3.1	Overview of legislation	223
15.3.2	Case law prior to statutory changes	224

15.3.3	Likely meaning to be given to 'serious harm': An examination of statute in light of case law	227
15.3.3.1	Ample scope of divergent judicial interpretations of 'serious harm'	227
15.3.3.2	Towards a narrow meaning of 'serious harm'	230
15.3.3.3	Refugee realities – no appetite for uninvited arrivals	231
15.3.3.4	The flourishing versus subsistence dichotomy	232
15.4	Other elements of persecution: The nexus between the grounds and the serious harm	232
15.4.1	Overview of nexus	232
15.4.2	Nexus elements of discrimination, systematic conduct, motivation and causation	233
15.4.2.1	Discrimination	233
15.4.2.2	Element of motivation	234
15.4.2.3	Systematic conduct	234
15.4.2.4	Causation	235
15.4.3	Prosecution and persecution distinction	237
15.4.3.1	States have unlimited power to prosecute citizens	237
15.4.3.2	Overlaps and tension: Prosecution and persecution	239
15.4.3.3	What is a law of general application?	240
15.4.3.4	General laws not persecutory	240
15.4.3.5	Selective enforcement of a law of general application	242
15.4.3.6	The 'legitimate objective and appropriate and adapted' test	243
15.4.4	Unsatisfactory state of existing law regarding nexus elements	245
15.4.5	A new unifying understanding: Discrimination as the touchstone where persecution stems from the operation or application of a law	246
15.4.5.1	The nature of discrimination	246
15.4.5.2	Statement of the new test for the requisite nexus between the grounds and the harm	248
15.4.5.3	The notion of a relevant difference	249
15.4.5.4	The legitimate objective and appropriate and adapted test as a synonym for relevant difference	250
15.4.6	A new test or unification of previous principles?	252
15.4.7	Relevance of proposed test where persecutory conduct is not pursuant to legal standard	254
15.4.8	Non-state agents: failure of state protection	254
15.4.9	Personal responsibility to avoid persecution	255
16	Well-founded fear of persecution	257
16.1	Overview	257
16.2	The subjective element	257
16.3	The objective element	258
16.4	Fear must be objective and subjective	260
16.5	The relevant time at which risk is assessed and relevance of past events and 'sur place' claims	261
16.6	Relocation	268

- 17 Limits on protection of refugees – cessation, exclusion exceptions and protection by another country 270
 - 17.1 Overview of exclusion, cessation and exceptions 270
 - 17.2 Cessation: Article 1C 271
 - 17.2.1 Articles 1C(1)–(4) voluntary actions by refugee 272
 - 17.2.2 Articles 1C(5)–(6) changed country circumstances 273
 - 17.3 Article 1D 274
 - 17.4 Article 1E 276
 - 17.5 Article 1F 276
 - 17.5.1 Overview of Article 1F 276
 - 17.5.2 Article 1F(a) – crimes against peace, war crimes, and crimes against humanity 277
 - 17.5.2.1 Crimes against peace 278
 - 17.5.2.2 War crimes 279
 - 17.5.2.3 Crimes against humanity 280
 - 17.5.3 Article 1F(b) – serious non-political crimes 281
 - 17.5.3.1 When is a crime serious? 282
 - 17.5.3.2 Meaning of (serious) non-political crime 284
 - 17.5.4 Article 1F(c) – acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations 287
 - 17.5.5 Evidential issues and the scope of individual liability 290
 - 17.5.6 Analysis of Article 1F 292
 - 17.5.7 Expulsion: Articles 32 and 33 293
 - 17.6 Country of reference and effective protection in another country 295
 - 17.7 Third country (or effective) protection 297
 - 17.7.1 Common law 298
 - 17.7.2 Statute 299
- 18 Time for a fundamental rethink: Need as the criterion for assistance 303
 - 18.1 Overview: Time to stop paying homage to the Convention and to fix it 303
 - 18.1.1 Refugee law – not humanitarian law – is the appropriate vehicle for change 304
 - 18.1.2 The implications of finite international compassion – proper targeting of refugees critical 305
 - 18.1.3 History of Convention inevitably resulted in flawed definition 308
 - 18.2 The problem with the Convention grounds 308
 - 18.3 An alternative definition 309
 - 18.3.1 Universal moral standards should underpin the new definition 309
 - 18.3.1.1 Overview of moral theory 310
 - 18.3.1.2 New approach not contingent on acceptance of particular moral theory 310
 - 18.3.2 Deontological rights-based theories underpinning the new definition 310
 - 18.3.2.1 The influence of rights-based theories 310

18.3.2.2	The absence of a foundation of rights	312
18.3.2.3	Explanation for the appeal of rights-based theories	313
18.3.3	Consequentialist underpinning to new definition – the preferred approach	314
18.3.3.1	Interlude – criticisms of utilitarianism	315
18.3.3.2	Horror scenarios not that bad	316
18.3.3.3	Utilitarian rights	316
18.3.4	Ramifications for a new definition	318
18.3.4.1	Repeal of grounds	318
18.3.4.2	Hierarchy of human interests – life and liberty as fundamental	318
18.3.4.3	Where to draw the line?	318
18.4	The preferred definition	320
18.4.1	Proposed definition	320
18.4.2	The concept of persecution is made (effectively) redundant	320
18.5	Concluding remarks	321
18.5.1	Practical obstacles to reform	321
18.5.2	The proposed definition is not a complete solution	322
19	The determination and review process for migration and refugee decisions	324
19.1	Merits review	324
19.2	Decisions reviewable by the MRT, RRT and AAT	324
19.3	Judicial review	325
19.4	Original jurisdiction of the High Court	327
19.5	Background to enactment of privative clause	328
19.6	Privative clause	335
19.7	Ministerial intervention	344
19.8	Commentary on current state of judicial review of migration and refugee decisions	344
	Index	346