

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
-------------------------------	------------

1. Introduction: Is Thailand a Constitutional Monarchy?	1
I. The Purpose and General Argument of the Book: Why the Thai Constitution Matters	5
II. The Issue of Royal Prerogatives in a Constitutional Monarchy: Text, Conventions and Doctrines	11
III. Sacred Monarchy vs. the Rule of Law: The Interplay of Law and Religion Mediated through Kingship	16
IV. Constitutional Bricolage: The Indeterminacy of Legal Transplants and their Political Re-assignments	20
V. Outline of the Chapters	27

PART I

IMPORTING THE MODERN CONSTITUTION

2. Siam's First Constitutions: The Rise and Fall of the Sacred Monarchy	35
I. The Hindu-Khmer Origins of the Traditional Constitution	35
II. The 1889, 1926 and 1932 Draft Constitutions: The Bonapartist and British Tropes	42
III. The 1932 Constitutions: The Soviet/Chinese and Prussian/Japanese Influences	47
3. Legal Positivism and Buddhist Kingship: Establishing the King as the Source of the Constitution	57
I. Hindu-Buddhist Theories: The Devaraja and Dharmaraja Kings	57
II. The European Influence: Importing Doctrines of Royal Absolutism	63
III. From the European Doctrine of 'Royal Octroy' to the King's Granted Rattathammanun	71
4. From the Sacred Monarchy to the Sacred Constitution	79
I. Royal Despotism, Theocracy and Sacred Law	79
II. Royal Reforms: The Westernisation of Law and Kingship	84
III. Royal Vetoes and Amnesties versus the Sacred Constitution	94

PART II
IMPORTING THE STATE OF EMERGENCY

5. Thailand's Cold War Constitutions: Constitutions for the Military	105
I. The 1947–1949 Constitutions: The Royalist Restoration and the Rejection of the British Model.....	105
II. The 1959, 1968 and 1972 Constitutions: Military Dictatorship and the Gaullist Inspiration	115
III. The 1974–1991 Constitutions: The US Influence on Military Dictatorship under Royal Command?	120
6. Revolutionary Legality and Buddhist Kingship: Theorising the King's Extra-Constitutional Powers in Times of Crisis	130
I. From Kelsen's Revolutionary Legality to Thai-Style Democracy	130
II. From Bagehot's Three Conventional Powers of the Monarch to the Invention of Thai Constitutional Customs.....	137
III. Revolutionary Legality Revised: The Doctrine of Shared Sovereignty between the King, the Military and the People.....	146
7. From Military Dictatorship to Military Dictatorship under (Sacred) Royal Command.....	152
I. The Monarchy against the Military: Practices of Royal Constitutional Veto	152
II. The Monarchy on Top of the Military: Royally Sanctioned Military Coups and Amnesty Laws for Coup-Makers.....	161
III. The Monarchy above the Military: Direct Royal Interventions against Military Juntas	166

PART III
IMPORTING CONSTITUTIONAL JUSTICE

8. Thailand's Post-Cold War Constitutions: Constitutions for the Judiciary	177
I. The 1997 Constitution: The Transformative 'Global South' Constitution.....	177
II. The 2007 Constitution: Juristocracy under US Inspiration?.....	189
III. The 2017 Constitution: Juristocracy and Military Dictatorship under Royal Command.....	194

9. The Rule of Law and Buddhist Kingship: Turning the Constitutional Court into a Substitute King	201
I. From the Rejection of the British Practice of the Royal Prerogative to the Creation of a Constitutional Court Ruling in the Name of the King	201
II. From US-Style Judicial Activism to 'Judicialisation': Transferring the King's Extra-Constitutional Powers to the Constitutional Court	209
III. From Global Discourses on the Rule of Law and Good Governance to the Doctrine of Dharmaraja Governance	217
10. From Judicialisation at the King's Request to Juristocracy under Royal Command	224
I. Judicialisation at the King's Request: Practices of Direct and Indirect Royal Vetoes	224
II. More Judicialisation at the King's Request: The Constitutional Court Defines 'DKHS' and its Customs	232
III. Royal Constitutional Vetoes, Lèse-Majesté and 'DKHS': The Affirmation of the Royal Prerogative	240
11. Conclusion: Democracy with the King as Head of State: The Bricolage of Thai Constitutional Identity	247
I. Summary of the Book's Contribution: Bricolage as a Process and Method in Comparative Constitutional Law	250
II. Taking Textual Provisions Seriously: On the Royal Prerogative and Constitutional Conventions	254
III. Taking Local Doctrine Seriously: On the Power of Legal Ideas and the Use of Religion to Localise Legal Transplants	258
IV. Taking Constitutional Practices Seriously: On Political Precedents and the Performativity of Constitutional Story-telling	262
V. Epilogue: Thailand and the Possibility of Decentring Comparative Constitutional Law	265
Appendix: Biographical Data of Major Thai and Foreign Jurists and their Contribution to Thai Constitutionalism	269
Bibliography	282
Index	319