

Table of Contents

Preface.....	9
Author’s introduction to the English translation.....	11
Introduction to the Persian original	14
The image of Muslim women in the world today.....	15
Who created this image?	16
Why has this image of women become current in Islamic jurisprudence?	19
Jurisprudence and Arab culture	20
Islam and jurisprudential rulings	23
Reviewing the arguments and the scope of their validity	29
Legislation and the exigencies of the time	34
Polygamy and Islam	38
Making an additional marriage conditional upon the consent of the wife, and the relevant ruling	42
Response to an ambiguity.....	49
Conditions stipulated in marriage contracts.....	52
A discussion of the ḥadīths	57
Benefits of stipulations in the marriage contract	62
Twenty-three cases of marriage with two wives	67
A wife’s freedom to leave the house	68
A woman’s leaving the house in violation of her husband’s right to sexual enjoyment	75
A woman’s right to sexual satisfaction.....	77
Should men dominate women?.....	83
Responsibilities and rights of a mother towards her child	91
Custody.....	92

Guardianship and its scope	96
Guardianship and the marriage of a young woman.....	97
The Guardianship of the mother	100
Divorce	104
A critique of jurisprudential rulings on divorce.....	107
The woman's consent in divorce	109
The age of puberty	111
Physical maturity	112
Mental maturity.....	114
Female judges	119
An examination of some ḥadīths.....	121
A woman's testimony	125
Cases in which a woman's testimony is not acceptable.....	127
Testimony as a means of acquiring knowledge	130
The implications of the ban on women's testimony	133
Two women's testimony as equivalent to one man's	135
Blood money for women	138
Women's Inheritance.....	144
Inheritance among the first Muslims	150
Conclusion	152
Bibliography	157
English bibliography.....	160
Glossary	161