

Contents

Acknowledgements VII

PART 1

The Emergent Dynamics of Religion

1 Religion as an Emergent Phenomenon 3

    Introduction 3

    An Overview of the Argument 6

    Background to the Emergent Theories of Durkheim and Rappaport 9

    Assumptions I will Make in this Study 12

2 Rappaport, Revisited 21

    Introduction 21

    Rappaport's Theory of Religion 23

    An Alternative Account of Rappaport 32

    The Example of Haitian Voodoo 40

    Summary 41

3 Emergence and Semiotics – a Primer 44

    Emergent Systems 44

    Semiotics 53

    Important Ideas from Other Theorists 63

    Summary 73

4 Religion's Emergent Characteristics 74

    The Importance of Human Culture 74

    The Emergent Dynamics of Human Culture 82

    Teleodynamic Religion and the Role of Symbolic Reference 93

    Semantic Closure, Strange Loops, and the Creation of a Social 'Self' 101

PART 2

The Emergence of Meaning in Religion

5 David Sloan Wilson and Daniel Dennett – Religion without Meaning 107

Wilson's Thesis 107

Is Religion Best Assessed by a Biological Theory? 112

Daniel Dennett's View of Religion 116

Response from an Emergent Approach to Religion 123

6 Émile Durkheim and the Emergence of Meaningful Social Agency 127

Emergence and Cultural Sociality 127

Why Religion? 131

The Problem with Durkheim's Conception of Religion 135

Durkheim and Emergent Meaning 139

7 Varieties of Religious Meaning 141

Religion Offers 'Therapeutic Truth' 141

Social Orientation 148

Emergent Selves needing Orientation 150

Different Ways of Considering the 'Spiritual Map', and Their Implications 154

Summary 161

Appendix: Confucianism as a Test Case 165

Works Cited 182

Index 192