

Contents

PREFACE	ix
1
EARLY THINKING ABOUT SOCIAL PERSONS	1
The Heritage From Antiquity	3
Questions and Answers From Classical Philosophy	5
2
INFLUENCES FROM THE RECENT PAST	21
The Impact of Darwin	21
Physiological and Experimental Psychology	25
Gestalt Psychology and Phenomenology	29
The Freudian Revolution	32
Cultural Anthropology	36
“Sociological” Sociology	40
American Pragmatism and “Psychological” Sociology	41

3
THE FORMATIVE YEARS OF SCIENTIFIC SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY		45
Resolution of the Great Controversies	46
Demonstrating that Social Psychology was Scientific	52
4
CONTEMPORARY SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY: THE EARLY DECADES		62
Social Psychology and the Second World War	63
Interdisciplinary Optimism	65
Interdisciplinary Disillusionment	69
Social Psychology's Early Accomplishments	70
5
THE CRISIS IN SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY		82
Criticism and Confusion in Social Psychology	83
Perspectives and Positions	89
Responses to the Crisis	92
Proposals for Major Changes in Orientation	94
6
CURRENT TRENDS IN SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY		98
The Crisis: Ten Years Later	98
Current Trends in Research, Theory, and Metatheory	103
From a Cognitive to an Integrative Theoretical Orientation	113
7
AN INTEGRATIVE THEORETICAL ORIENTATION		116
Prerequisites for an Integrative Orientation	116
The Social Act as a Unit of Analysis	119
Normative Processes in the Social Act	123

Identity Processes in the Social Act	126
Reference Processes in the Social Act	129
Implications of the Integrative Theoretical Orientation	131

REFERENCES	137
-------------------	------------

AUTHOR INDEX	161
---------------------	------------

SUBJECT INDEX	168
----------------------	------------