

{ CONTENTS }

Acknowledgments	vii
Contributors	ix
 Introduction: The Second World War and the Civil Rights Movement	 3
KEVIN M. KRUSE AND STEPHEN TUCK
 1 Freedom to Want: The Federal Government and Politicized Consumption in World War II	 15
JAMES T. SPARROW
 2 Confronting the Roadblock: Congress, Civil Rights, and World War II	 32
JULIAN E. ZELIZER
 3 Segregation and the City: White Supremacy in Alabama in the Mid-Twentieth Century	 51
J. MILLS THORNTON III
 4 Movement Building during the World War II Era: The NAACP's Legal Insurgency in the South	 70
PATRICIA SULLIVAN
 5 Hillburn, Hattiesburg, and Hitler: Wartime Activists Think Globally and Act Locally	 87
THOMAS SUGRUE
 6 "You can sing and punch . . . but you can't be a soldier or a man": African American Struggles for a New Place in Popular Culture	 103
STEPHEN TUCK
 7 "A War for States' Rights": The White Supremacist Vision of Double Victory	 126
JASON MORGAN WARD
 8 The Sexual Politics of Race in World War II America	 145
JANE DAILEY

9	Civil Rights and World War II in a Global Frame: Shape-Shifting Racial Formations and the U.S. Encounter with European and Japanese Colonialism	171
	PENNY VON ESCHEN
10	Race, Rights, and Nongovernmental Organizations at the UN San Francisco Conference: A Contested History of “Human Rights . . . without Discrimination”	188
	ELIZABETH BORGWARDT
11	“Did the Battlefield Kill Jim Crow?”: The Cold War Military, Civil Rights, and Black Freedom Struggles	208
	KIMBERLEY L. PHILLIPS
	Index	231