

Contents

Part I Sociological Perspectives on the Senses

Broadening Horizons or New Blinders? On the Sensorial Turn in the Social Sciences	3
Paul Eisewicht, Ronald Hitzler, and Lisa Schäfer
The Obstinacy of the Senses	17
Hans-Georg Soeffner
The Social Construction of Smells	29
Thomas S. Eberle
Smell and Knowledge: On the Pre-reflexive Order of Reality	43
Jürgen Raab
The Problem of Perspectivity: Consequences of Spatial Sociological Considerations for the Reconstruction of Subjective Meaning	57
Jochem Kotthaus and Sebastian Weste

Part II Practice, Movement, Coordination: Physical Positioning

Understanding Making Music Together: On the Sensuality of Making Music in String Ensembles	77
Theresa Vollmer
Balance as a Skater's Duty? Sensual-Trained Action as an Expression of Scene Affiliation in Skateboarding	99
Pao Nowodworski
Skating Amongst Shiny Cars: Polishing as a Sensual Care Practice . . .	117
Rebecca Bügener

“How It Should Look Like”: The Importance of the Perception of Others and Tacit Knowledge for One’s Own Body Movement in Olympic Weightlifting	133
Marie Marleen Heppner

Part III Racism, Disgust, Gender: Audiovisual Differentiation

Music Video, Scene Media, and Social Media as Parts of a Grounded Theory Analysis of the Pop Cultural Negotiation of Racism	153
Marc Dietrich

Ero Guro Nansensu in the Visual Kei Scene: Reconstructions of a Phenomenology-Based Video Analysis	167
Babette Kirchner, Julia Wustmann, Pao Nowodvorski, and Nico Steinmann

Cross-Dressing in the K-Pop Scene: Playing with the Senses	183
Rabea Krollmann

Part IV Material, Digital, Pathological: Social Belongings and Boundaries

“You Can Really Recognize the Real Cosplayers Because They Really Put in the Effort”: (Self-Created) Costumes as a Material Indication of Belonging	207
Nico Maximilian Steinmann

The Sensory Perception of the Digital: Towards the Digitalized Management of Belonging Using the Example of a School Ethnography	223
Maria Schlechter and Tilo Grenz

Entsinnung. About a Pathological Modification as a Civilizational Option and Anthropological Provocation	239
Ronald Hitzler	