

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements

viii

THE ARGUMENT

- 0 A Theory of Cinema that Can Account for Indian Cinema 3

THE EVIDENCE

'Bollywood' and the Performing Citizen

- 1 'Bollywood' 2004: The Globalized Freak Show of What Used to Be Cinema 51

- 2 When Was Bollywood?: Textual and Historical Discrepancies 69

- 3 The Cinema-Effect 1: Cultural Rights versus the Production of Authenticity 84

- 4 The Cinema-Effect 2: Social Lineages, Spectatorial Ability 106

The Cinema-Effect and the State

- 5 Administering the Symbols of Authenticity Production, and Revisiting a 1990s Controversy 133

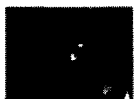

- 6 'You Can See without Looking': The Cinematic 'Author' and Freedom of Expression in Cinema 167

- 7 'People-Nation' and Spectatorial Rights: The Political 'Authenticity-Effect', the Shiv Sena and a Very Bombay History 193

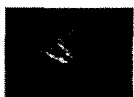

1970s Questions: The 'Cinema-Effect',
the National-Symbolic and the Avant Garde

- 8 The Detour of the Nation:
Realist Complicities, Nationalist Excesses  219

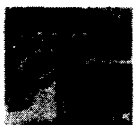

- 9 The Indian Emergency: Aesthetics of State Control 231

- 10 The Problem: A 'Co-production of Modernities'  255

- 11 The Mechanism: 'Taking' the Shot 274

The Practice: Two Films and a Painting

- 12 Bhupen Khakhar's List: Revisiting View from the Teashop 295

- 13 Mani Kaul and the 'Cinematic Object': Uski Roti
and the Rulebook of Cinema  319

- 14 Gautam Ghose's Maabhoomi: Territorial Realism and the 'Narrator'  352

AFTERWORD

- 15 The Cinema-Effect: A Concluding Note 395

Bibliography 401

Index 429