

Music and Decadence
in European Modernism:
The Case of
Central and Eastern Europe

STEPHEN DOWNES

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of examples [page ix]

Acknowledgements [xii]

1. Decadence, music and the map of European modernism [1]
 - Introduction [1]
 - Music and decadence [5]
 - Defining and defending decadence [29]
 - The sources and styles of modern decadence [36]
 - Themes of decadence in Central and Eastern Europe [44]
2. Pessimism and nihilism [63]
 - Introduction [63]
 - Nietzsche's symptoms of decadence: Turgenev, Baudelaire, Schopenhauer [66]
 - Musical pessimism: Wagner, Tchaikovsky and Strauss [73]
 - Dionysus debilitated: the symphonic poems of Karłowicz [84]
 - Divergent Russian decadents: Rachmaninov, Scriabin and the end [97]
 - Bartók's elegiac modernism [113]
3. Degeneration and regeneration [126]
 - Introduction [126]
 - Brünnhilde's double end [134]
 - Salome's double end [154]
 - The double Elektra [163]
4. Deformation and dissolution [174]
 - Introduction [174]
 - Romantic wave form and energetics [175]
 - Intensification and dissolution: a wave deformation in Strauss's Salome [186]
 - Resisting decadence: the finale of Mahler's Sixth Symphony [194]
 - Berg's Op.1 and the emaciation of dissonance [203]
 - Artificial waves: the Count's ballad from Schreker's Der ferne Klang [213]
5. Mannerism and avant-garde [224]
 - Introduction [224]
 - Russian miniaturism: Scriabin, Lyadov and the Chopinesque [226]
 - Strauss and mannerism: Der Rosenkavalier [237]

Decadence and avant-garde: extremes touch	[245]
Strauss as decadent and avant-gardist	[251]
Hearing decadence in Schoenberg	[258]
6. Convalescence and primitivism	[279]
Introduction	[279]
Nietzsche contra Schumann? The convalescent philosopher-composer	[282]
Wagnerian agony and Wolf's leading-note treatment	[299]
Szymanowski, pain and recovery: the rehabilitation of Chopin and Dionysian regeneration	[312]
Bibliography	[332]
Index	[361]