

Contents

List of illustrations	page vii
Introduction	1
1 Reconceiving sexuality 1900–1914	6
Prostitution, venereal disease, and the double standard	7
Theorizing desire	15
Separating sex from reproduction: contraception and abortion	18
Eugenics	24
Rethinking sexual orientation	28
Further reading	41
2 State interventions 1914–1945	45
World War I and its aftermath: violence and opportunity	45
Fascism: masculinism and reproduction	61
Nazism: human engineering and the promise of pleasure	67
Democratic welfare states: liberality and ambivalence	75
Holocaust and World War II	83
Further reading	94
3 Cold War cultures 1945–1965	96
Mass violence and the return to domesticity	96
Conservatism, east and west	100
The rise of romance	106
Ambivalence about contraception	111
The persecution of homosexuals	117
The rise of reform	122
Further reading	131
4 Pleasure and rebellion 1965–1980	133
The market of desire	134
Revolutionary theories	146
Changing the law	152
Heterosexual disillusionment	161
Homosexual liberation	168
The turn inward	172
Further reading	174

5 Partnerships and practices 1980–2010	176
HIV/AIDS	177
The fall of communism	183
Postfascist lessons in human rights	195
Islam and the sexual borders of Europe	198
Romantic liberality versus new conservatisms	205
Further reading	215
Epilogue	218
Further reading	221
Acknowledgments	222
Index	224