

Contents

- Abbreviationsvii
- Acknowledgements ix
- Chapter 1: Introduction 1
 - 1.1. Point of departure and previous research 4
 - 1.2. Aims, scope and delimitations of the study 10
 - 1.3. Outline of the thesis 13
 - 1.4. Sources and selection procedure..... 14
 - 1.5. Notes on transliteration 14
 - 1.6. Religion in Russia in the 1990s and 2000s 16
 - 1.7. Theoretical background: discourses and vertical transfers 26
 - 1.8. Discourse analysis as method 35
- Chapter 2: Zoroastrianism in the frame of religious practice 39
 - 2.1. Zoroastrian voices and their resonances 39
 - 2.2. Information flood: books, periodicals, translations, and Internet presence 48
 - 2.2.1. Words of the Master Pavel Globa..... 49
 - 2.2.2. Group activity: The St. Petersburg magazine Mitra and the community messenger Tiri 53
 - 2.2.3. Internet mission of the Russian Anjoman..... 56
 - 2.2.4. A step aside: Kosmoenergetika and other NRMs..... 57
 - 2.3. Formal structures 58
 - 2.4. Selected topics 70
 - 2.4.1. Between secret doctrine and universal religion..... 70
 - 2.4.2. The “Good religion” and the destiny of Russia 79
 - 2.4.3. A religious ideal: Being Zoroastrian..... 88
 - 2.4.4. The Avesta and other holy books 92
 - 2.4.5. Zoroastrianism confronting other religions 94
 - 2.5. Summary 99
- Chapter 3: Zoroastrianism in the Russian academic discourse 107
 - 3.1. A historiographical perspective on Zoroastrianism..... 108
 - 3.1.1. Zoroastrian texts translated into Russian..... 113
 - 3.1.2. Zoroastrianism and social-economic history 117

3.1.3. The reception of Western scholarly works	122
3.2. Contemporary Zoroastrianism in Iranian studies and the study of religion	124
3.2.1. Scholarly skepticism surrounding neo-Zoroastrians	124
3.2.2. Russian Zoroastrianism as a pagan religion	130
3.2.3. An extinct or a living religion?.....	133
3.3. Summary	136
Chapter 4: Zoroastrianism within the journalistic field.....	139
4.1. New mass media and Zoroastrianism	139
4.2. A media kaleidoscope: thematic convergence	147
4.3. Media events and media actors	149
4.4. Zoroastrianism as a main reference	154
4.5. Sharing mass media space with other religions	157
4.6. Journalistic evaluation	158
4.7. Summary	159
Chapter 5: Zoroastrianism in contemporary Russian fiction	163
5.1. Religion in Russian fiction in times of change.....	163
5.2. Thus spoke the Russian Zarathustra	169
5.3. Zarathushtra in the context of European discourses	173
5.4. Zoroastrianism in past, present, and future modes	181
5.4.1. The past: ancient Persia and magic	182
5.4.2. The present: petroleum and mirrors.....	190
5.4.3. The future: star wars and love for the motherland	195
5.5. Summary	199
Chapter 6: Zoroastrianism in modern Russia: studying discourses and transfers.....	205
6.1. Zoroastrianism in a mirror: its images in contemporary texts	206
6.2. Descriptive strategies and discursive modes	213
6.3. Studying contexts and some comments on method	216
References	221
Appendix.....	237
Selected materials to Chapter 2:	237
Websites:.....	237
Books, articles, scripts:.....	238
Selected materials to Chapter 3:	242
Selected materials and their abbreviations to Chapter 4:	251
Selected materials to Chapter 5:	252