

Contents

List of contributors	page vii
Acknowledgements	xii

Introduction: reconsidering detachment	1
Matei Candea, Joanna Cook, Catherine Trundle and Thomas Yarrow

Part I Professionalism and expertise

1 Some merits and difficulties of detachment	35
Maryon McDonald
2 Virtuous detachments in engineering practice – on the ethics of (not) making a difference	58
Hannah Knox and Penny Harvey
3 Artisanal affection: detachment in human–animal relations within intensive pig production in Britain	79
Kim Crowder
4 Professionalism and expertise: comment	102
Veena Das

Part II Ritual and religion

5 Engaged disbelief: communities of detachment in Christianity and in the anthropology of Christianity	115
Joel Robbins

6	Detachment and ethical regard James Laidlaw	130
7	Detachment, difference and separation: Lévi Strauss at the wedding feast Caroline Humphrey	147
8	Ritual and religion: comment Michael Carrithers	168

Part III Detaching and situating knowledge

9	The capacity for re-description Alberto Corsín Jiménez	179
10	Test sites: attachments and detachments in community-based ecotourism Casper Bruun Jensen and Brit Ross Winthereik	197
11	Detachment and engagement in mindfulness-based cognitive therapy Joanna Cook	219
12	The discourse of ignorance and the ethics of detachment among Mongolian Tibetan Buddhists in Inner Mongolia, China Jonathan Mair	236
13	Detaching and situating knowledge: comment Marilyn Strathern	256

	Index	265
--	--------------	-----