

WOJCIECH PIASEK

^{*}
ANTHROPOLOGISING
HISTORY:
A HISTORIOGRAPHIC AND METHODOLOGICAL CASE
STUDY OF WITOLD KULA

TRANSLATED BY BARBARA KOMOROWSKA

WYDAWNICTWO NAUKOWE
UNIWERSYTETU
MIKOŁAJA KOPERNIKA

Toruń 2018

Contents

The Introduction: a Horizontal Overview of Historiography	7
---	---

Chapter I

The Anthropological Dimension of History	25
1. The cultural individualisation of historical reality	25
Cultures as particular, contextual and systemic totalities	26
The complex nature of cultural historical reality	29
2. The socio-cultural character of historical reality	31
3. Culture as a humanistic functional structure	32
A humanistic functional structure	32
Determining	36
The natural environment	37
The openness of the structure	39
4. Cultural globalisation	40
5. The duration, change and decline of culture	43
Cultural adaptation	43
Evolution without teleologism	45
Progress and evolution	53
6. Man as a zoon culturalis	56
Meeting needs as the goal of human activity	56
The cultural satisfaction of needs	59
Freedom of choice	62
The rational nature of choices	65

Chapter II

The Anthropological Nature of Historical Cognition	69
1. History as a study of culture	69
History and cultural anthropology	81
2. History as a science and a field of culture	85
3. Historical cognition as scientific intercultural translation	94

Chapter III

The Scientistic Anthropologising of Economic History	103
1. The anthropological perspective in research on the economy	105
2. Economic history as historical and comparative anthropology	113
The formalising and dramatising perspectives of research into the acts of economic choice	120
The formalising perspective of research	120
The dramatising perspective of research	130
Integral interpretation in economic history understood as historical and comparative anthropology	144
3. The historical and comparative method	146
Conclusions	155
Literature	165
Name Index	181