

CONTENTS

Note on cover	ix
List of figures	x
 Part 1 Into the labyrinth	 1
1.1 Starting out	1
1.2 On ethnography	5
1.3 Scientific, hermeneutic and collaborative paradigms in anthropology	7
1.4 Brief history of fieldwork methods in anthropology and some classic examples	19
 Part 2 Ethnographies in flow	 28
2.1 Designing the research	29
2.2 Fieldwork as a methodological situation	34
2.3 Where to go?	38
2.4 Landings	48
2.5 Considering participant observation	61
2.6 On informants or interlocutors	70
2.7 Conversing, listening, interviewing and keeping quiet	86
2.8 Stories and itineraries of the body	105
2.9 Ethnography, audio-visual techniques and media, and new digital ecologies	117
2.10 Farewell to the field	134
2.11 Writing ethnography	141

Part 3 Ethnographies of the present and the future	156
3.1 Globalisation: evolving research scenarios	156
3.2 Walking the tight rope: transnational research and “multi-sited” ethnography	163
3.3 The ethnography of shock: violence, conflict, and social suffering	169
3.3.1 From everyday violence . . .	180
3.3.2 . . . to postconflict research	190
Bibliography	201
Index	218