

Bioarchaeology of Marginalized People

Edited by

Madeleine L. Mant

Memorial University, St. John's, NL, Canada

Alyson Jaagumägi Holland

McMaster University, Hamilton, ON, Canada

FID SOZIAL UND
KULTURANTHROPOLOGIE
Institutionen der Universität zu Köln

ACADEMIC PRESS

An imprint of Elsevier

Contents

List of Contributors	xiii
Foreword	xv
Acknowledgments	xxi
1. Introduction	1
Madeleine L. Mant and Alyson Jaagumagi Holland
Contributions	5
References	8
2. Mummies, memories, and marginalization: the changing social roles of a mummy from ancient to modern times	11
Andrew J. Nelson
Introduction	11
Some Preliminaries	12
Marginalization	12
Identity	13
Lady Hudson	14
Personal Identity	16
Mortuary Identity	17
Curated Identity (I)—The Collector	18
Curated Identity (II)—Education	21
Curated Identity (III)—Museum Exhibit	22
Curated Identity (IV)—A Changing Role	22
Curated and Bioarchaeological Identity (V)—Research Subject	23
Bioarchaeological Identity	26
Conclusions	27
Acknowledgments	28
References	28
3. Task activity and tooth wear in a woman of ancient Egypt	33
Nancy C. Lovell and Kimberley E. Palichuk
Introduction	33
Assessment of Nonalimentary Tooth Wear	35

Interpretation of Nonalimentary Tooth Wear	40
Wedge-Shaped Wear	43
Vestibular Abrasion Patches	44
Women's Work in Ancient Egypt	46
Acknowledgments	47
References	47
4. Looking into the eyes of the ancient chiefs of shísháhl: the osteology and facial reconstructions of a 4000-year-old high-status family	53
Terence Clark, Matthew Betts, Gary Coupland, Jerome S. Cybulski, Jasmine Paul, Philippe Froesch, Steven Feschuk, Raquel Joe and Gretchen Williams
Introduction	53
Kwenten Makw'ali and the Beginnings of a shísháhl Archaeological Research Project Partnership	55
Understanding the People	56
Building the Display	58
Creation of the Reconstructions	59
Documenting the Collaboration	63
Unveiling the Faces	64
Conclusion	65
References	66
Further Reading	67
5. "Officially absent but actually present": bioarchaeological evidence for population diversity in London during the Black Death, AD 1348–50	69
Rebecca Redfern and Joseph T. Hefner
Introduction	69
Background to Studying Diversity in the Medieval World	72
Enslavement and Mobility in the Medieval World	73
Archaeological Context: The Black Death and Medieval London	76
Materials and Methods	78
Selection of a Subsample	78
Osteology	81
Ancestry	81
Reference Data	82
Missing Data Imputation	82
Canonical Analysis of the Principal Coordinates	83
Quadratic Discriminant Function	84
Results	88
Funerary Context	88
Light Stable Isotopes and Mitochondrial DNA	88
Ancestry	91
Health Variables	94

Discussion	100
Conclusions	106
Acknowledgments	106
References	107
6. Marginalized by choice—Kayenta Pueblo communities in the Southwest (AD 800–1500)	115
Debra L. Martin
Introduction	115
Kayenta Region	117
Population Growth and Paleodemography	120
Diet, Health, and Trauma	121
Nutritional Anemia	122
Nonspecific Inflammation	125
Dental Disease	126
Perimortem Trauma	127
Antemortem Trauma	128
Conclusions	128
References	129
Further Reading	131
7. Marginalized bodies and the construction of the Robert J. Terry anatomical skeletal collection: a promised land lost	133
Carlina de la Cova
Introduction	133
The Robert J. Terry Anatomical Skeletal Collection: Robert J. Terry and the Origins of His Collection	134
Amassing the Terry Collection: A Biological Archive of the Marginalized and Socioculturally Disappeared	137
Identifying and Unsilencing the Marginalized: Demography, Dissection, and the Terry Collection	139
A Promised Land Lost: The Great Migration, Structural Violence, Anatomization, and the Terry Collection	145
Going to the Promised Land: Hopes for Migration and Grim Realities Encountered	149
Remembering Those Lost in the Quest for the Promised Land	151
References	153
8. Health inequity and spatial divides: infant mortality during Hamilton, Ontario's industrial transition, 1880–1912	157
Natalie C. Ludlow and Paul Hackett
Introduction	157

Historical Background	159
Materials and Methods	160
Results	162
Discussion	170
Conclusions	176
References	177
9. In the shadow of war: the forgotten 1916 polio epidemic in New Zealand	181
Heather T. Battles
Introduction	181
Sources and Methods	183
1916 by the Numbers	184
Population	184
Polio Mortality	185
Polio and the Great War	189
Impact of the War on the Public Health Response	189
Grief Upon Grief: Mourning Polio Victims in Wartime	191
“Hunnish Plots and Intrigues”: Fear, Blame, and Anti-German Paranoia	192
Infantile Paralysis as Threat to the State	193
Rehabilitating Wounded Soldiers and Polio Survivors—and Rehabilitating Public Opinion?	194
Discussion and Future Directions	197
References	200
10. Exploring the effects of structural inequality in an individual from 19th-century Chicago	205
Shelby L. Doubek and Anne Grauer
Introduction	205
Placing a Life in Historical Context	207
Appreciating a Human Body	208
The Importance of Social Context	211
Recognizing the Embodiment of Marginalization	215
Moving Forward	217
Acknowledgments	218
References	218
11. Down and out in postmedieval London: changes in welfare ideology and the impact on the health of workhouse inmates	223
Brittney K. Shields Wilford and Rebecca Gowland
Introduction	223
Historical Background	224

Changing Opinions of the Poor	225
Materials and Methods	226
Osteological Samples	227
Nutritional Materials	229
Results	230
Nutritional Changes	230
Age and Sex Structure of the Cemeteries	232
Pathological Changes	233
Discussion and Conclusion	234
References	237
12. Innovation in population health intervention research: a historical perspective	243
Paul Hackett, Juanita Basco, Tom McIntosh, Bonnie Jeffery and Nazeem Muhajarine
Introduction	243
Why Use a Historical Approach to Population Health Intervention Research?	245
Methodological Application: Conducting Population Health Intervention Research Using a Historical Approach	249
Innovative Outcomes: Examples	251
Future Directions	256
Conclusion	257
References	257
13. Mapping marginalized pasts	261
Madeleine L. Mant and Alyson Jaagumagi Holland
Discussion/Conclusion	261
Marginalization as a Process of Peripheralization	262
Marginalization as a Loss of Individuality	263
Marginalization: Positivity Through Difference	264
Marginalization as a Divorce From Context or a Process of Forgetting	265
References	267
Index	269