

Contents

General Editors' Preface	vi
Preface	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
 Part One: Contexts
1 Introduction: Mass-Observation, Difference and the Anthropology of 'Ourselves'	3
2 Mass-Observation, 'Race' and Nation	29
 Part Two: Praxis – From Fieldwork to Directive
3 Exploring Otherness: Mass-Observation in 'Darkest' Britain	59
4 Beyond the Opinion Poll? The Mass-Observation Directive	103
 Part Three: Of Ourselves, By Ourselves: The Mass-Observation Diaries
5 Mass-Observation and the Genre of Diary Writing	149
6 Racism With the Boots Off? From Individual Prejudice to Collective Violence in the Mass-Observation Diaries	166
7 'I am All Women who are Tortured': Persecuted Jews at Home and Abroad and the Mass-Observation Diaries	189
8 The Intimacy of Difference: Confronting Minorities in Everyday Life through the Mass-Observation Diaries	219
 Conclusion and Afterword: Reclaiming the Volvox	 244
Bibliography	261
Index	277