Contents

Preface vii

Introduction 1

1 Structural Individualisation 9
1. From Structural Differentiation to Hyper-differentiation? 9
2. Beyond the Uncoupling of Systems and Lifeworld? 13
3. Individualisation: Structurally Enabled or Systemically Compelled? 17

2 Normative Individualisation 25
1. Socialisation: A Continuous State of Becoming? 25
2. Shifting the Boundaries: Towards Organised Individualisation 30
3. Individualised Integration: An (Im)Possible Balancing Act? 38

3 The Individualisation of Society 43
1. Politicisation: A Detour through Norms or Systemic Organising Principle? 44
2. Marketisation: A Shortcut through Markets to Social Integration? 50
3. Integration through Work: Detour through Norms or Shortcut through Markets? 59

4 The Individualisation of Organisations 67
1. Networks: Coordinating Markets or Forums for Public Debates? 67
2. Corporatisation: Primary Form of Organisation or Negotiation? 75
3. Integration Management: Systems under the Guise of Lifeworlds? 83

5 Managing Individualisation at Work 91
1. Autonomy: 'as if they worked independently' 92
2. Continuity and Fragmentation: Having a Normal Life 103
3. Recognition: Kicking Bums and Patting Shoulders 112

6 Organising Individualisation at Work 123
1. People Management: Walking on Water, While Running on Trust? 123
2. Corporate Culture: Catchphrase or Normative Control Mechanism? 134
3. Project Management: If it is Not a Work Project, it's a Home Project 145

Conclusion: Organised Individualisation 153
1. Individualisation and the Proliferation of Ambiguities in Late Modernity 153
2. Three Forms of Individualisation 156
3. Deficiencies in Social Integration 161

Bibliography 169
Index 181