

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	vii
Note to the Routledge edition	viii
Preface	ix
 Introduction	 1
 PART I
Contexts	13
1 Changing places: the court and the city	15
2 The pleasures of the imagination	55
 PART II
Print	109
3 Authors, publishers and the making of literary culture	111
4 Readers and the reading public	141
 PART III
Paint	165
5 The market and the academy	167
6 Connoisseurs and artists	204
7 Painters' practice, artists' lives	232
 PART IV
Performance	259
8 The Georgian stage	261

9	The theatre, power and commerce	287
10	Performance for the nation	308
PART V
Making a national heritage		339
11	Borrowing, copying and collecting	341
PART VI
Province and Nation		393
12	The English provinces	395
13	Thomas Bewick: 'The poet who lives on the banks of the Tyne'	399
14	'The harmony of heaven': John Marsh and provincial music	425
15	'Queen Muse of Britain': Anna Seward of Lichfield and the literary provinces	455
PART VII
Britain		485
16	Culture, nature and nation	487
Conclusion		521
Bibliography		523
Index		542