

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
1 Introduction	1
Feminist theory and sexuality	2
What's love got to do with it?	4
The tenacity of gender inequality	7
Feminism, ontology and the rejection of realism	9
Critical realism: an excursus	11
The structure of reality: necessity and complexity	12
The dialectical core of reality	15
Outline of the book: from sexuality to love	17
PART I
Feminist modes of theorizing sexuality and gendered power	23
2 Judith Butler and the deconstruction of reality	25
Sex and gender: performative effects of discourse	26
The subject: reversing the causal arrows	29
Sexuality: nature abjected	32
Power: inevitable and unacceptable	35
Fighting with power's own tools	37
Ad hoc realism	39
Conclusion	40
3 Anna Jónasdóttir and the organic roots of power	43
Sex/gender: a generative process	45
Sexuality: a historical-materialist ontology	47
Love power and the production of human life	49
The nature of love	50

Power: structural compulsion and human neediness	52
Male authority and female sociosexual poverty	54
Ecstasy versus care	56
Conclusion	58

PART II

Meta-theoretical interlude: Challenging poststructuralist feminism	61
---	----

4 Feminist theory and nature	63
-------------------------------------	----

Feminist nature-phobia	63
Restoring the status of nature	65
The glorification of indeterminacy	67
Nature's constraining force	70
Transcending dualisms – the dialectical-emergentist solution	73
Dialectical antagonists and 'pomo flips'	76
Conclusion	78

5 Women and men as theoretical categories	79
--	----

The intersectional challenge: women are not only women	80
Anticategorical intersectionality	82
Discriminatory anticategoricalism: 'women' as particular minefield	84
The rejection of biological sex	85
Constructed, hence unreal?	88
The concrete and the abstract	90
Structures, positions and people	92
Conclusion	94

PART III

The reality of love and power: A feminist-realist depth approach	97
---	----

6 Loving him for who he is: The microsociology of power	99
--	----

Asymmetrical role-taking: or 'loving him for who he is'	101
'I am very demanding'	102
Women as technical problems	104
The gendered mediation of love: expectations and gratitude	105
The costs and benefits of conforming	107
The risks and promises of resisting	108
Conclusion	109

7 Love: Exploitable resource or 'no-lose situation'?	112
MetaReality – realism's self-transcendence	114
The causally efficacious illusion of 'demi-reality'	117
Love as the fundament of existence	119
The illusoriness of patriarchal reality	122
The necessity of conflict in the present world	125
Conclusion	128
8 Men in love: The work of repressing reality	131
Dialectical contradictions	131
The exploiter's burden	133
Men's dependence on women's freedom	135
The double-edged sword of control	136
Reality biting back	138
Men's ambivalent interest in women's pleasure	140
Male emancipation	143
Conclusion	145
9 Reality and change	147
The real and the 'really real'	148
Female withdrawal: laying bare men's dependency	150
Getting to the root of causality: a depth mode of feminist transformation	152
Women's anger	154
Diseffectuating the illusion of female powerlessness	156
Irigaray, Bhaskar and the ethics of letting go	158
Breaking the circle of unworthiness	160
Conclusion	162
10 Conclusion: Necessity and the power of love	166
A feminist dialectical-realist depth ontology of love and power	167
A project of reconciliation	169
 References	 171
Index	181