

Contents

List of figures	ix
List of tables	xi
List of textboxes	xiii
About the authors	xv
Preface	xvii
Acknowledgements	xix
1 Introduction	1
Defining social psychology	3
The crisis in social psychology	4
Social cognition	6
Aims of this book	7
Organization of this book	8
Concluding comments	11
PART ONE	13
2 Theoretical Foundations	15
Introduction to social cognition models	15
Introduction to social identity theory	26
Introduction to social representations theory	36
Introduction to discursive psychology	48
A post-cognitive psychology?	62
Chapter summary	63
Further reading	64
PART TWO	65
3 Social Perception	67
Social cognition and social perception	67
Social identity theory and social perception	87

Social representations and social perception	91
Discursive psychology and social perception	100
Chapter summary	107
Further reading	108
4 Attitudes	109
What is an attitude?	109
Social cognitive approaches to attitudes	111
Attitudes and social identities	131
Attitudes and social representations	134
Discursive psychology and attitudes	137
Chapter summary	142
Further reading	143
5 Attributions	145
Social cognition and attribution	145
Social identity and attributions	165
Social representations and attributions	168
Discursive social psychology and attributions	176
Chapter summary	182
Further reading	183
6 Self and Identity	185
Social-cognitive approaches to self and identity	187
Functions of the self	192
Social identity approaches to self and identity	199
Social representations approaches to self and identity	208
Discursive approaches to self and identity	212
Chapter summary	217
Further reading	218
7 Prejudice	219
Social cognition and prejudice	220
Social identity and prejudice	239
Social representations and prejudice	246
Discursive psychology and prejudice	250
Chapter summary	256
Further reading	258

8	Ideology	259
	Social cognition and ideology	260
	Social identity and ideology	265
	Social representations and ideology	272
	Discursive psychology and ideology	278
	Chapter summary	284
	Further reading	284
PART THREE		285
9	Conclusion	287
	The individual and society	288
	Levels of analysis	289
	Realist vs constructivist epistemologies	290
	Social change	290
	Further reading	292
	Glossary	293
	References	297
	Index	343

List of Figures

1.1	The Understandascope by Michael Leunig	1
2.1	Mapping of medial frontal cortex activations observed during action monitoring, social cognition and outcome monitoring (Amodio & Frith, 2006, p. 271)	25
3.1	The social category ‘elderly people’ differentiated hierarchically into lower-order subtypes that are associated with distinctive personality traits (adapted from Brewer, Dull & Lui, 1981)	76
3.2	A graphic representation of the social cognitive approach to categorization (adapted from McGarty, 1999)	89
4.1	The theory of planned behaviour (Fishbein & Ajzen, 2010)	125
4.2	The composite model of attitude–behaviour relations (Eagly & Chaiken, 1993)	126
5.1	Weiner’s attributional model (from Weiner, 2012)	151
5.2	Quattrone’s three-stage model of attribution (adapted from Gilbert, 1995)	152
5.3	Mean attributed attitude scores (and variances in parentheses), according to essay direction and degree of choice (Jones & Harris, 1967, p. 6)	155
5.4	Mean ratings of self and other general knowledge by questioners and contestant in a quiz game experiment (Ross, Amabile & Steinmetz, 1977)	157
5.5	Australian respondents’ beliefs about climate change, and estimates of the population prevalence of beliefs about climate change (from Leviston et al., 2012)	162
5.6	Australian respondents’ estimates of the population prevalence of beliefs about climate change, broken down by respondents’ own beliefs (from Leviston et al., 2012)	163
5.7	Pattern of internal and external attributions made by Catholic and Protestant students for acts of violence committed by Catholics and Protestants (Hunter et al., 1991, p. 263)	167

5.8 Cultural and developmental patterns of dispositional attribution (data from Miller, 1984)	172
6.1 Different levels of self-categorization	202
7.1 The proposed linear relationship between categorization, stereotyping, and prejudice	239

List of Tables

2.1	Example of an 'intergroup differential' payoff matrix used in a minimal categorization experiment	28
3.1	Summary characteristics of schemas/categories	72
5.1	Comparisons between British Conservative and Labour voters' explanations for poverty	174

List of Textboxes

2.1 Implicit cognition	19
2.2 Debating climate change	44
2.3 Talk is cheap	52
3.1 The politics of categorization: asylum seekers, refugees or illegal immigrants?	103
4.1 Implicit attitudes	114
4.2 Measuring ambivalent attitudes to women	117
4.3 The issue of 'attitude consistency'	141
5.1 Do people attribute spontaneously?	152
5.2 Attribution, false consensus and political debate	161
5.3 Lerner's (1980) 'Just World' hypothesis	175
5.4 Attributional inferences about asylum seekers	179
6.1 Twenty Statements Test	186
6.2 The paradox of choice	196
6.3 Identity politics and affirmative action	207
6.4 The 'authentic' self	211
6.5 Identity projects: what does your breakfast cereal say about you?	215
7.1 Social Dominance Orientation Scale	228
7.2 Self-sufficient arguments in political rhetoric	254
8.1 Political affiliation as a way of meeting psychological needs?	261
8.2 Measuring stereotype accuracy	268
8.3 System-justification and willingness to protest	270
8.4 Realism versus relativism	280