

Contents

Figures, Tables, and Photographs — XIX

Abbreviations — XXIII

Spelling of Dongria words — XXV

1 Introduction — 1

1.1 The people — 1

1.2 Theoretical framework — 6

1.2.1 Value-ideas — 8

1.2.2 Hierarchy — 9

1.2.3 Whole, contexts, and levels — 10

1.2.4 Universalism, holism, and comparison — 11

1.3 Representing fieldwork — 12

1.3.1 Writing Culture — 12

1.3.2 The fieldwork situation — 16

1.4 Content and organisation of the work — 37

1.4.1 Chapter 2: “Tribal society” in the Niamgiri Hills — 37

1.4.2 Chapter 3: Dongria social categories, rules, and practices — 39

1.4.3 Chapter 4: Negotiation, violence, and love — 42

1.4.4 Chapter 5: The clan sacrifice: Creating Niamgiri society — 46

1.4.5 Chapter 6: Conclusion: A system of ideas and values — 51

2 “Tribal society” in the Niamgiri Hills — 52

2.1 Introduction — 52

2.2 Theoretical concepts — 54

2.2.1 The notion of “tribe” and its critique — 54

2.2.2 Tribe and caste in Odisha: The debate — 60

2.2.3 “Tribals” and “untouchables”: Kond and Dombo — 63

2.2.4 Untouchability, the jajmani system, and patron-client relations — 65

2.3 Value-ideas — 71

2.3.1 Kond “inside the village” (rechagiri), Dombo “outside the village” (akagiri) — 72

2.3.2 Kond as “kings” (raja), Dombo as “subjects” (praja) — 74

2.3.3 Kond as “senior” (kaja), Dombo as “junior” (icha) — 75

2.3.4 Kond as “humans” (kuang), Dombo as “ghosts” (marha) — 78

2.3.5 Dombo and Dongria as “one clan” (ra kuda) — 79

2.3.6	Dombo and Dongria as “friends” (tone / ade) —	82
2.4	Social boundaries —	87
2.4.1	Closed spaces —	87
2.4.2	Prohibited food —	89
2.4.3	Forbidden women —	92
2.5	Forms of interdependence —	93
2.5.1	Dombo as generalists —	93
2.5.2	Allocation of land and agricultural cooperation —	96
2.5.3	Wet rice cultivation and individual property —	99
2.5.4	Small village traders and influential urban dealers —	102
2.5.5	Sharing and selling of alcohol —	107
2.5.6	Dombo as traders and herders of animals —	109
2.5.7	Barika : Village trader, arbitrator, messenger, and politician —	113
2.5.8	Money and the “other,” sharing and the “own” —	121
2.6	Ritual interaction —	127
2.6.1	The debate —	127
2.6.2	Religious status and ritual office —	128
2.6.3	Dombo as “communicators with the divine” —	129
2.7	Conclusion: Tribal and caste societies —	132
3	Dongria social categories, rules, and practices —	140
3.1	Introduction —	140
3.1.1	Terminology, norms, and practice —	142
3.1.2	Diachronic alliance with relatives: The “South Indian kinship system” —	149
3.1.3	Perpetuating alliance through gifts: The “North Indian kinship system” —	155
3.1.4	Alternation and delayed alliance: The “Central Indian kinship system” —	160
3.2	Terminology —	171
3.2.1	The data —	172
3.2.2	Analysis —	174
3.2.3	Interpretation —	189
3.3	Rules —	191
3.3.1	The concept of “clan” (kuda) —	196
3.3.2	Kond “totemism”: Relations between clan and territory —	199
3.3.3	Affines (gota), siblings (tayi bai), and friends (tone) —	202
3.3.4	“Dongria clans” and “Desia clans” —	206
3.3.5	Prohibited degrees for marital relationships —	209

- 3.4 Practice — 215
 - 3.4.1 The treatment of clan incest — 216
 - 3.4.2 Marriage between brother clans? — 217
 - 3.4.3 Marriages between clan territories (muta) — 220
 - 3.4.4 Marriages between villages (padari) — 228
 - 3.4.5 Marriage with “relatives” — 236
- 3.5 Conclusions — 244
 - 3.5.1 Descent, territory, and residence — 244
 - 3.5.2 Comparison of terminology, rules, and practice — 248
 - 3.5.3 Proximity and incest, distance and fertility — 249
 - 3.5.4 Violent habitus, status, and strategies — 251
- 4 Forms of marriage: negotiation, violence, and love — 256
 - 4.1 Introduction — 256
 - 4.1.1 Approaches to bride capture and marriage — 257
 - 4.1.2 Kond marriage and the legacy of John F. McLennan — 258
 - 4.1.3 Understanding present forms of Kond marriage — 267
 - 4.1.4 Anthropological approaches — 268
 - 4.2 Categories of Dongria Kond marriage — 271
 - 4.3 Collective contracts: Arranged marriages — 277
 - 4.3.1 Prestations: An overview — 283
 - 4.3.2 samudi sekena (“we discuss with in-laws”) — 285
 - 4.3.3 karjame (“serving son-in-law”) — 292
 - 4.3.4 mahala takang (“betrothal fee”) — 297
 - 4.3.5 ijo henga hana (“we go to see the house”) — 311
 - 4.3.6 tone paga tinja hana (“we go to eat the rice of friendship”) — 314
 - 4.3.7 hedi tana (“we bring the girl from far away”) — 315
 - 4.3.8 giri takoli (“to bring the path”) and wenda kodang (“old legs”) — 340
 - 4.4 Youthful deviation: Love marriage, bride capture, and collective settlements — 344
 - 4.4.1 Youth within the age system — 345
 - 4.4.2 Dormitories — 353
 - 4.4.3 Bride capture (ahpa tana or “let’s catch and bring”) — 383
 - 4.4.4 Conflict settlement — 389
 - 4.5 Conclusion: Forms of marriage, reciprocity, and social distance — 403

5	The clan sacrifice: Creating Niamgiri society — 412
5.1	Introduction — 412
5.1.1	From human sacrifices (meria) to buffalo sacrifices (kodru parbu) — 414
5.1.2	Interpretations of Kond human sacrifice (meria) — 418
5.2	The buffalo sacrifice (kodru parbu): An overview — 423
5.2.1	Place: The sacred layout of a village — 423
5.2.2	Time: Date and intervals — 436
5.2.3	Costs: Financing the sacrifice — 444
5.3	Preparations — 451
5.3.1	kanga parbu : The “pigeon-pea festival” — 451
5.3.2	Purchasing the sacrificial animals — 462
5.3.3	Preparing the sacrificial site — 467
5.3.4	Showing round (trehnari) and feeding (tisnari) the buffalo — 494
5.4	Sacrificial objects — 499
5.4.1	Sale of village territory: Transfer of pots (daka), hearth (halu), and spoon (hetu) — 503
5.4.2	Clearing the village land: The axe (tangi) of the first settlers — 506
5.4.3	Clan land and rulership: The umbrella (satara bonda) of the king — 510
5.4.4	Clan land and sacrifice: The knife (suri) that “eats” the victim — 516
5.5	Sacrificial specialists — 518
5.5.1	Historical and modern accounts — 518
5.5.2	Forms of ritual specialisation among Dongria — 522
5.5.3	Worshippers of the earth goddess: janninga — 530
5.6	Performing the sacrifice — 535
5.6.1	Preparations — 536
5.6.2	sukruwar satara line (“on Friday the umbrella will stand”) — 542
5.6.3	saniwar desa rundam ane (“on Saturday non-relatives will assemble”) — 553
5.6.4	adiwar kodru mada ane (“on Sunday the buffalo will be killed”) — 564
5.6.5	Distribution of the meat — 574
5.7	Conclusions — 579
5.7.1	kodru parbu and feasts of merit — 579
5.7.2	Creating society: Sacrifice and social structure — 583
5.7.3	Sacrifice and marriage — 591
5.7.4	Ritual and political organisation — 596
5.7.5	Myth and ritual — 599
5.7.6	Fertility: Exchange and violent appropriation — 605

6	Conclusion: A system of ideas and values — 609
6.1	Introduction — 609
6.2	Female values: “life” (jiu / jela) and “wealth” (lahi) — 609
6.3	Male ways of obtaining “life” and “wealth” — 614
6.3.1	Violent appropriation: Hunting (beta) — 615
6.3.2	Negotiation and bargaining: Reciprocal exchange (hinga tana or “to go, give, and bring”) — 616
6.3.3	Sharing (bat kina) — 617
6.4	Male values: Senior (kaja) and junior (icha) — 619
6.5	The whole — 620

7 Glossary — 623

Appendix 1:

Family tree of icha jani segment (Gumma) — 631

Appendix 2:

Marriage relations between Gumma and other villages — 632

Appendix 3: Numbers and names of villages — 634

Appendix 4:

Plan of a Dongria house — 635

Appendix 5:

Plan of a Dongria house (profile) — 636

Appendix 6:

Myths about Duke and Dumbe — 637

References — 640

Index — 653