

WHITEFELLA COMIN'

Aboriginal responses to colonialism
in northern Australia

David S. Trigger

Department of Anthropology
The University of Western Australia

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York Port Chester Melbourne Sydney

Contents

Preface	ix
Abbreviations and conventions	xii
1 Doomadgee: the politics of colonial social relations	1
2 'Wild Time': a history of coercion and resistance	17
3 Station and fringe-dwelling life	38
4 Doomadgee Mission: institutionalisation and a new form of colonial struggle	57
5 Whitefella comin': power relations and the different domains	79
6 Politics and identity within the Aboriginal domain	104
7 Authority relations, the missionary staff and Aboriginal consciousness	128
8 Councillors, 'Yellafellas' and the influence of colonial ideology	163
9 Christianity, domination and resistance	189
10 Coercion, resistance and accommodation in colonial social relations	219
Appendix A: Historical movements of five example groups	227
Appendix B: Incomplete list of individuals removed from Burketown, Turn Off Lagoon & certain stations, 1912-36	235
Bibliography	238
Index	246

List of maps

1. Southern Gulf of Carpentaria region, northern Australia	xiv
2. Linguistic territories	19
3. Portion of sketch map by W Roth	28
4. Example groups: estates and movements	226

List of figures

1. Site plan of the settlement following	80
2. Case 1 showing people affiliated with an area in Yanyula country	228
3. Case 2 showing people affiliated with an area in Garawa country	229
4. Case 3 showing people affiliated with an area in Waanyi country	231
5. Case 4 showing people affiliated with an area in Ganggalida country	233
6. Case 5 showing people affiliated to Bayley, Pains and Forsyth islands	234